Fight to win grammar places set to benefit from 'satellite'

By Marijke Cox
marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

AN HISTORIC vote into selective school expansion has given the green light for the long-awaited creation of new grammar places in Sevenoaks.

County Hall chiefs voted in favour of establishing a new 'satellite' school which would be linked to existing grammars in either Tunbridge Wells or Tonbridge.

The move should ease the crush for places in selective schools in Tunbridge Wells - which currently has heavy demand from youngsters in the Sevenoaks district.

The new places will not operate on a super-selective basis - such as that in force at Skinners, but purely on a catchment area.

It will involve a new four-form entry selective school of around 120 pupils per year, with two forms for girls and two for boys. Sevenoaks currently has no grammar provision.

The costs of development are likely to be between £13-15million.

There is no timescale on the places available for children.

The move sparks the first major expansion of a grammar school in 50 years after education laws - which forbid the building of new grammars - were changed to allow them to expand on different sites.

Frustrated parents in Sevenoaks jumped at the opportunity and launched a petition, gathering 2,620 signatures and forcing a debate at Kent County Council.

A landslide 66 of the 70 KCC councillors voted in favour, with many expressing concern over the situation in Sevenoaks where grammar school chil-

SHOCK AND SNORE: 20-year-old Maria O'Connor fell foul of Lord Sugar, who fired her from her bid to become The Apprentice

I knew Lord Sugar would fire me says 'shouty' Apprentice star, Maria

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SELF-CONFESSED maneater Maria O'Connor failed to make Lord Sugar fall in love with her on The Apprentice – and got herself fired.

Before the series started, she boasted about being able to wrap the grumpy boss, and pretty much any other man, around her little finger before simply ditching them after getting what she wanted.

But the 20-year-old owner of Greek restaurant Elizavet, in Sandwich, was unceremoniously booted off the show on Wednesday night.

Before she became the second in the series to be fired by Lord Sugar, his sidekick Nick Hewer said: "She is just a bit shouty, I think. She is a very noisy young woman."

And Lord Sugar said: "It looks like she just wants to row. She looks a fiery person." And Karen Brady said: "Maria has got lots of energy, but she just doesn't know how to channel it."

Before she was fired, Maria was told by her team leader that she didn't pull her weight on the task to create a household gadget, despite another boast in the show that she will have five Kent restaurants by the time she's 25.

Her card may well have been marked after she fell asleep during a car ride as her team discussed whether to go with a 'tap cosy' or a child's bath splash protector. They went with the bath protector, and failed miserably against the men's food waste compactor.

And she knows why their product didn't win – she told KoS: "It was st."

Maria admits she is outspoken, and she was arrested at the age of 17 along with her then-boyfriend, and released without charge.

Of her time at Mortimers restaurant in her home town of Herne Bay, she hit back at claims she gave elderly diners heart attacks because her dress style.

She said: "God knows what they are saying there. I was in a black shirt and trousers, I didn't think that would give people a heart attack."

And of taking a 20-second snooze in the car, she blamed fellow contestant Jane McEvoy for doing her hair at 4am after Maria got to bed after midnight.

She said: "I wasn't sleeping. She was stomping about at 4am. I think it was one of her tactics."

The restaurateur believes she was hung out to dry by her team because she didn't fit the typical businesswoman mould.

Maria said: "I stood out from the others and set myself up to fall there. But really, what does it matter? I knew I wouldn't win, but I thought I would give it a go and if I won, I won. When I entered it, I did it on a whim. But it was amazing. I enjoyed every moment."

To get on, she had to undergo about 10 interviews after filling out an online application.

Maria said: "They don't do it on looks, and there is not a screen test, it's all done on your character. Even the interviews were enjoyable."

"I would recommend everyone to have a go. It is an experience of a lifetime. I have made loads of friends, and it can expand your business contacts."

"It's really beneficial for running a business."

The show was filmed last year, and she knows who the finalists are, but admits she is amazed at some of those who made it through. Maria said: "I was surprised."

And she quickly moved to deny she is in a relationship with anyone on the show, especially Duane Bryan.

On her restaurant, which is taken from a family named handed down through the generations, and is Maria's middle name, she said: "I worked hard. It's all my own money. No loans either. I just worked really hard rather than going out and getting drunk and I saved my money."

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Hosepipe ban to start

WATER chiefs are reminding people that Kent's hosepipe ban comes into force on Thursday, April 5. The hosepipe ban includes watering a garden or plants; cleaning a car or boat; filling a swimming or paddling pool; filling a pond or ornamental fountain; cleaning walls or windows of a home; and cleaning paths or patios. A spokesman for Veolia Water, one of Kent's suppliers, said: "We have to carefully manage the water we have to see us through the summer months."

➔ Police union strike vote

THE Police Federation is to ballot its members on industrial rights, in response to proposals to remove officers' protections, including a 'no redundancy' deal. Kent Police Federation chairman Ian Pointon said: "This government has deliberately steered themselves onto a collision course with police officers. Only they know their motivation for that. Officers believe these attacks on their protections go far beyond 'everyone being in this together'."

➔ Sheep virus spreads

KENT still has the country's highest number of outbreaks of Schmallenberg virus, which causes lambs to be stillborn or badly deformed. Of 223 farms hit across the country, Kent has 37 sheep farms with infections, and four cattle farms. The disease arrived in infected midges that travelled across the Channel from Europe. A vaccine against the disease may be up to two years away.

DEATH

Controversial amusement park boss Jimmy Godden passes away

ONE of Kent's most high-profile businessmen – famous for his seafront amusements empire – lost his battle with cancer this week.

Jimmy Godden passed away at the Royal Marsden Hospital in London on Tuesday.

He had been receiving treatment for cancer for two years.

His family told KoS they would be releasing a statement at an appropriate time.

Mr Godden, who was born in Folkestone, was most well known for his amusements businesses, including the Dreamland fun park in Margate, which he bought off the Bembom family in 1996.

The park boasted the popular Grade II* Scenic Railway ride.

Mr Godden also operated Ramsgate Pleasure

Park, which was on the site of former Ramsgate Harbour railway station, Rotunda theme park on Folkestone seafront in the town where he was born, and an amusement park in Dymchurch.

His wide portfolio of properties and investments included JG's amusement arcades in Thanet and Dover.

In 2003, Mr Godden announced Dreamland would close and the land to become a retail and commercial site.

But after opposition plans were put forward to change it into a heritage theme park. Proposals are currently under inquiry.

Mr Godden became a controversial figure after closing his amusement parks for redevelopment, including Rotunda and the Ramsgate Pleasure Park.

High streets could feel the heat as businesses battle over 'pasty tax'

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

CONTROVERSIAL plans to put VAT on hot pies and pasties could spark a new hot food war on the high street, according to the boss of one of Kent's biggest independent food retailers.

Andrew Rook of JC Rook and Sons, which has fresh meat outlets across the county, believes it could see butchers and bakers go head-to-head with traditional fish and chip shops in a bid to make up money lost from customers put off by the price hikes.

At present, VAT does not apply to a pie that has been baked on the premises and sold to customers as it is cooling down.

However, if it is heated up by the shop to be sold to the hungry customer, VAT does have to be applied.

Chancellor George Osborne is looking to close what is seen as a loophole in the legislation by making any food product sold above the ambient temperature of the store slapped with VAT.

It has made headlines this week as the so-called 'pasty tax'.

It is designed to stop the likes of Greggs and the major supermarkets selling what is essentially take-away food but without the 20 per cent added VAT that would be payable.

Mr Rook, who has 16 outlets including stores in Maidstone, Broadstairs, Whitstable, Hythe, Sittingbourne and Tunbridge Wells, said: "In the past we have not offered chips because we did not want to be in the VAT bracket.

"But what this change will do is move a lot of the goalposts. In the short term we may expect some loss of trade as prices will rise, but we are going to look at other things we can do to counter its impact."

And that could include offering chips alongside the shops' pasties and pies.

The new regulations, outlined in last week's Budget, will come into force on October 1.

Mr Rook added: "It is a bit hard to tell how it will affect us until it comes in. Overall I think it will mean that we can do other things to complement what we offer the customer."

The legislation has been criticised for hitting the pockets of already hard-pressed consumers.

It has also been said that it will be impossible to enforce the tax because of confusion on how it is applied.

Mr Rook said: "At what point do you call something a hot pie or just a pie that is still warm. It is all very ambiguous at the moment and that why the bill will have to go through Parliament to try and iron out these issues."

Simon Reynolds from the bakers AE Barrow and Sons in Sittingbourne added: "This is something that has happened for a long time in the industry.

"At the moment if we heat a pasty up for a customer we have to ring it through the till with the VAT added, if it is cold we do not."

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Pond deaths drug ban

A LEGAL high linked to the death of two men from Canterbury is the first drug to be banned under new legislation. Methoxetamine, also known as MXE, has been described as a designer drug used on the dance scene. It will be made illegal under a Temporary Class Drug Order while the Home Office decides if it should be permanently controlled. Buskers Hugo Wenn, 17, and Daniel Lloyd, 25, drowned in Reed Pond in Canterbury in January. Both taken MXE before they died.

➔ Dinner tribute to chef

JANET Street-Porter will be guest of honour at a fund-raising tribute dinner for Jonny Dunhill, owner of Ramsgate's Eddie Gilbert's restaurant and wet fish shop, who died in February, aged 49. The six-course dinner, at Thanet College's Bay View Restaurant in Broadstairs, is on Monday, May 28. Tickets cost £30. The dinner will raise funds for Pilgrims Hospice in Margate, and to create an annual bursary scheme for students of Kent's catering colleges.

➔ Pupils get the bird

STUDENTS across Kent have been monitoring the attendance of feathered visitors to their schools in the RSPB's Big Schools Birdwatch survey. The blackbird came top of the class, with an average of 5.6 birds being accounted for in 89.2 per cent of schools. The starling came in a close second, with an average of 4.58 birds per school being registered in 53 per cent of schools. The blackheaded gull was the third.

TRANSPORT

Towers closure congestion 'not as bad as we feared' says road chief

ROAD managers in Canterbury say they are keeping their fingers crossed after the closure of the Westgate Towers, which started on Monday.

The new traffic scheme is part of a year's trial to see if traffic can be permanently stopped from going through the historic building and improve the air quality in the St Dunstan's area.

Closing the Westgate Towers to traffic means that vehicles approaching the city from Whitstable will be redirected via Canterbury West station to the town's ring road.

Executive member for transportation Cllr Peter Vickery-Jones said: "We did face the first morning with tremendous trepidation as frankly we had no idea how it would go. You can forecast things as much as you like.

"It was not as bad as I had feared; in the St Dunstan's area the traffic was no more than you would have expected on a normal day, but it may have been people were keeping away."

Along with the closure of the 14th century defensive gateway to the city a number of surrounding roads have been closed. A new traffic light system allows buses and taxis to drive alongside the towers, but this route is closed to general traffic.

On the first morning the new road layout did seem to have some repercussions for drivers. Although rush-hour traffic seemed to keep moving as the day went on, traffic was reported to be tailing back further back along St Dunstan's Road.

Cllr Vickery-Jones said: "There may have been knock-on affects elsewhere. I understand coming out of Asda on Sturry Road was worse than normal but we hope that will settle down."

The council wants to protect the towers which were regularly damaged by large lorries and buses that squeezed through the ancient archway.

Cllr Vickery-Jones said: "The last thing we want to do is ruin people's lives, what we are trying to do is improve people's lives and in so doing it will protect the Westgate Towers.

"Canterbury cannot be ruled by the car. It is too vital and important for all of us for that to happen. People should be able to enjoy it properly as it should be."

The council will monitor traffic flow and air quality in the area for the next year. By the second day traffic was reported to be moving more freely.

ANIMAL EXPORTS

Warning notices issued to lorries carrying live exports as RSPCA vows to get tough

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

THE RSPCA has sent inspectors to Ramsgate to monitor the export of live animals from the town's harbour.

It comes after the animal welfare charity's new chief executive, Gavin Grant, met with Thanet District Council.

The meeting also involved members of the group Compassion in World Farming (CIWF) along with local campaigners who have protested against the trade which began from the port nearly a year ago.

Chief Inspector Dermot Murphy said: "The RSPCA is against the long-distance transport of live animals for slaughter or further fattening, and we were at Ramsgate port, at the agreement of Thanet District Council and Animal Health, to ensure welfare rules are not being flouted.

"The RSPCA has been making sure the animals have access to water, that there are non-slip floors or bedding down, and that the calves and sheep are in a fit condition to travel. We have made it clear that if there are breaches of the rules we will take action."

Four lorries carrying around 1,800 sheep and 100 calves, arrived at the port on Wednesday.

They were greeted by protesters as they entered the harbour. The RSPCA inspectors assessed the welfare of the animals and examined the trucks.

Two hauliers were issued with RSPCA warning notices – one for having broken ventilation fans and another for mixing sheep, including some with horns, from different flocks in the same lorry. Government body Animal Health also issued similar notices.

A vet was also present to check the animals were in a fit state to travel.

Mr Murphy added: "We hoped the days of seeing lorry loads of calves and sheep being shipped to Europe where they can face long journeys and may be reared in conditions which would be illegal here, were long behind us.

"Sadly that is not the case, but while this trade continues the RSPCA will be at ports checking the welfare of the animals."

The RSPCA has said it has serious concerns about the suitability of the slow-moving boat, the Joline, which is being used to ship animals abroad as it can take up to six hours to make the crossing.

Mr Murphy added: "This is the first time the RSPCA has been involved in a port inspection for a number of years, so in a sense we are starting again.

"The whole operation went well. We have to be careful not to stress the animals anymore than they already are in the truck.

"We believe meat should be a carcass-only trade. We will look to make this a regular operation to see what we can do to make this trade as safe as possible."

According to Freedom of Information requests submitted by Compassion in World Farming, 9,000 calves went through Kent ports last year.

The NFU has said it will work with CIWF to find a long-term alternative to the calf trade, but it defends its members exporting animals.

NFU chief dairy adviser Robert Newbery said: "The free trade and movement of farm animals between EU member states is a legitimate and lawful activity which is inspected and subject to strict legislative controls focused on guaranteeing high standards of animal health and welfare – an issue which we take very seriously.

"The NFU supports these controls and has continuously argued for a high standard of enforcement across all EU member states."

PETROL CRISIS

Fire crews' warning on storing fuel after minister sparks panic buying

FIREFIGHTERS have warned about the dangers of storing petrol after Cabinet Office minister Francis Maude advised drivers to store fuel in a jerrycan in their garage.

His advice sparked panic buying of fuel and came after Unite union drivers, who supply 90 per cent of UK forecourts, voted to strike.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service (KFRS) said while the industrial action will not have any effect on its frontline services, the public should be aware of the fire risks around the storage of fuels.

KFRS head of community safety Stuart Skilton said: "We are reminding residents petrol is a hazard as it gives off a highly flammable vapour and must be handled with extreme care. It should be kept away from any means of ignition and people should never smoke around it.

"We strongly advise against bulk buying and storage of petrol and people need to be aware that there are strict regulations about how and where it is kept."

LITERATURE

Kent Police analyst plots her latest perfect crime – in the garden shed

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FROM the outside, it was a normal house in a sleepy village.

But inside the shed at the end of the well-kept garden, it became a sinister den of vice where sickening plots of murder were being, erm, plotted – by Britain's brightest new crime writer.

Elizabeth Haynes, who lives in Eccles near Maidstone, had always loved scribbling down her tales of dread and disaster and seven years ago decided to enter the National Novel Writing Month to test her mettle.

Fast-forward to last year and her first title ended up as Amazon's book of the year, and the second, based in and around Medway, hit the shelves this month.

All of which has left Mrs Haynes shocked by the mountain of praise that has been heaped upon her in recent months.

She said: "I've always written short stories, but when a friend introduced me to National Novel Writing Month in 2005, I had an excuse to write something full-length.

"Known as NaNoWriMo, it is an online challenge to write 50,000 words during November.

"There is no prize, other than the satisfaction of having written a novel; it's all about quantity over quality, but having unshackled yourself from the pressure of needing to produce something good, it's surprising how the end results usually contain little nuggets of brilliance.

CRIMINAL INTENT: Author Elizabeth Haynes

"With a first draft complete, you have text to edit – which is a big advantage over all those who write sporadically and never manage to finish anything. Having tackled NaNoWriMo every year since 2005, 2008's effort resulted in a story I was reasonably pleased with.

"It had those key ingredients: a beginning, middle and end, good characters and a plot – and to my amazement, was published by Myriad Editions in 2011, as Into the Darkest Corner.

"Its success took me completely by surprise.

"Amazon in particular promoted it early on by including it in the Rising Stars, which it went on to win. Amazon also named it as their Book of the Year, and it's featured in Channel 4's TV Book Club and been shortlisted for the People's Book Prize.

"There is also talk about it becoming a movie."

Mrs Haynes, a Kent Police analyst, said: "No pressure, then, to try and match these achievements with my second book.

"Revenge of the Tide is mainly set in Medway. The heroine lives on a barge moored on the tidal Medway, near Rochester, and those familiar with the area may recognise the book's locations."

Its main protagonist, Genevieve, is a high powered executive and secret pole dancer.

Mrs Haynes, who admits her pole dance lessons taken to give her a sense of how hard it is almost killed her, said: "I'm already editing my next book – a dark story about living in isolation, which will be published in early 2013. It involves an intelligent man with no idea about women, using hypnosis to get sex, but then finds it more fun to convince the women to consider suicide."

And just to make her feel the pain of her characters a little more, she does all her writing at the bottom of the garden, in the shed. She said: "Somehow, it seems the best place to plot a murder."

She is taking part in Waterstone's Thanet's Psychological Crime Night on April 19 at 5.30pm, call 0843 290 8643. She is also speaking at the opening evening of the new Kent History and Library Centre, Maidstone, on April 23.

HS1 figures prediction was 'hugely optimistic'

A REPORT has revealed the number of international passengers using the HS1 Channel Tunnel high-speed rail line is two-thirds lower than expected.

The National Audit Office (NAO) said passenger numbers between 2007-11 were just two-thirds of the level forecast by the Department for Transport, and that predictions were "hugely optimistic".

The government department said it has now improved its forecast model.

The NAO said the Department for Transport was only now developing its plan to see whether the project was value for money.

HEAVEN-SENT: The new telescope will help the Mid-Kent Astronomical Society with their work and provide even more breathtaking images, like this one of Jupiter captured by Gavin Lacey

ASTRONOMY

Observatory's donation of top telescope leaves society all starry-eyed

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE heavens are about to come a little closer to Kent after a team of stargazers staged a major coup to obtain one of Britain's best telescopes.

The Royal Observatory, Edinburgh, has agreed to give one of its professional telescopes to the organisation.

The Mid-Kent Astronomical Society already had its head in the clouds after staging a series of astonishing displays of its equipment for the public to use when they appeared on the BBC's Stargazing Live programmes earlier this year.

Best loved on the evenings were the mountains on the Moon and awe-inspiring close-up views of Jupiter.

Now with the Edinburgh telescope on its way to the county, local stargazers will have an even better view of the sky at night.

Noel Clark, from the society said: "If people found the views through our other telescopes exciting, they will feel their brains being sucked into space by this baby."

The Grubb Parsons half-metre aperture telescope is one of the largest in amateur hands. It was originally built in 1967 to train students at Edinburgh University, but it is now upgrading and making its original equipment available.

Local haulier Matt Swain has even agreed to transport the huge piece of scientific equipment for free.

The donated telescope will be housed at the James Irwin Observatory in the grounds of Canterbury Academy and Adult Education Centre.

The society has a programme to refurbish the telescope, equip it with new instruments and use it for public observing, and to support science teachers delivering astronomy in local schools.

The society's plans include providing disabled access by making live viewing possible in the ground floor warm-room, and providing access to observing sessions via the internet.

Mike Phillips, chairman of the Mid-Kent Astronomical Society, said: "We have big plans for this telescope to provide views of our universe to school groups and all who are interested.

"We look forward to introducing many more people to the wonders of the night sky."

He added: "Being awarded this incredible telescope is a real privilege. Our members' many years of experience and joy at observing the night sky can be built on, and research enhanced. It will harness enthusiasm as well as providing a much-needed resource for educational establishments and societies interested in astronomy across Kent."

The telescope presently sits on top of the Royal Observatory building in Edinburgh.

To remove it, the two-tonne dome will be lifted and a crane will lower it down in one piece.

The observatory received more than a dozen applications from Europe and America for the equipment, but the one from Kent stood out, resulting in a stunned

Mr Phillips receiving a telephone call to say the bid had been successful.

Mark Collins, of the UK Astronomy Technology Centre at the Royal Observatory Edinburgh, will oversee the removal.

He said: "The Kent society made an excellent case for acquiring the telescope and we are glad that it will continue to give service to UK astronomers for many years to come."

Anyone wishing to look at the stars, or who is interested in the telescope can contact the group through its website at www.midkentastro.org.uk.

Game over as retailer hits off button for good

A NUMBER of Kent stores of video game retailer Game are on the closure list after the firm fell into administration this week. Administrators said 277 of its 609 Game or Gamestation stores would close immediately, with the loss of more than 2,000 jobs nationwide. In Kent they include outlets in Ashford's County Square, Bluewater, Bromley High Street, Canterbury High Street, Maidstone's Chequers and Ramsgate High Street.

Man suffers burns after chip pan blaze

A MAN from Deal had to be treated for burns and smoke inhalation after he attempted to put out a fire caused by a chip pan. Fire crews were called to the blaze in Canute Road at around 6.40pm on Monday and brought the man to safety. Crew manager Paul Evans said: "After phoning 999, he mistakenly tried to tackle the fire himself, before evacuating the property but suffered minor burns to his hands in the process."

NATURE

Exotic beetle outbreak a threat to native trees

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TREES across Britain could be seriously affected by an invasion in Kent of the dreaded Asian longhorn beetle.

The bug is not naturally found in the UK and experts believe it may have arrived from Asia by hitching a lift on cargo containers.

The outbreak in the Paddock Wood area is a serious concern. The beetles feed from the inside of plants and trees leaving them either dead or dying within a single season. And they spread fast.

The discovery has been announced by the Food and Environment Research Agency (Fera), part of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

It is the first time the pest has been found in the UK and it is being treated extremely seriously.

Fera and the Forestry Commission is now taking urgent steps to eradicate them before they spread. Several larvae of the beetle have been found during a routine survey by the Forestry Commission at a site in the Paddock Wood area.

Scientists from Forest Research had been monitoring an area around the site where an adult beetle had been found in 2009, and this is the first evidence of infestation.

It is thought the beetles originated from wood packaging used to import stone from China at a neighbouring industrial site.

Martin Ward, head of plant health policy at Fera, said: "Our plant health inspectors and the Forestry Commission are conducting a survey to determine the extent of this outbreak.

"In the meantime we would urge members of the public, to be on the alert for the beetle and let us know if they find anything."

Spotting them is easy. Adult beetles are large at 20-40 mm long, and shiny black with variable white markings. Their antenna is particularly distinctive, being much longer than their bodies at twice the body length. They are black with white and light blue bands.

The thing to look out for are the circular adult exit holes which are around 10mm in diameter and are generally found in the main trunk and branches, but that is usually too late for that tree as the damage internally has been done.

A spokesman for Fera told KoS: "The last thing we want to be doing is chopping down vast swathes of Kent woodland."

The adult beetles usually emerge from these exit holes between May and October.

Anyone who thinks they have spotted an Asian longhorn beetle or evidence of its presence can contact the Fera Plant Health Helpline 0844 2480071 or email planthealth.info@fera.gsi.gov.uk. They ask any beetle be caught and placed in a secure container for an inspector to collect.

They are not harmful to humans, but should be handled with care as they can nip.

DEADLY TO WOODLAND: The Asian longhorn beetle feeds from the inside of trees, leaving them either dead or dying within a single season

Councils urged have 'local plan' or lose power to say no to developers

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

REVISED planning rules published this week after a year of controversy have kick-started a frantic push to make sure every council has a 'local plan' in place.

That's because of fears that those without one may forgo any say over what developments can go ahead in their area.

While conservationists welcomed the newly published National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) – which promotes sustainable development and construction on brownfield sites – they admitted concerns over the 12-month transition period given to councils to draw up a local plan.

This is a document created by councils setting out future growth, but also putting in place controls over potential developments.

Jamie Weir, spokesman for Protect Kent, the county's branch of Campaign to Protect Rural England, said Thanet and Canterbury had yet to complete the document.

"Both Thanet and Canterbury are going to really struggle to get a local plan in place by the time the 12 months is up, which could result in developments those areas do not want simply because they will not have the power to say no," he said.

"There are a number of areas within these districts that could be 'up for grabs' by developers which could result in undesirable development."

A Thanet council spokeswoman said the authority does have a local plan in place, but the council was reviewing planning policy.

"It is expected that new policy will be consulted on by the end of the year," she said.

A spokesman for Canterbury council said: "We are preparing a new local plan and within the transition period we should have completed consultation on a 'preferred option'. This means that weight can be given to the draft plan at that stage."

Initial fears about 'unprotected' areas of land – those without special designation including large parts of Romney Marsh and south Maidstone – were alleviated by the new planning rules.

Mr Weir said: "The Romney Marshes should not be up for grabs in the way that we had feared, as the concerns we expressed that 'ordinary' countryside would not be protected have been allayed by the NPPF in its final form."

Mr Weir said controversial development plans such as Chilmington Green, which involves building a new town on countryside on the edge of the Kentish Weald, and Lodge Hill, plans for 5,000 homes on the Hoo Peninsula, would not be changed by the NPPF and it would be down to both Ashford and Medway Councils to decide on whether they should go ahead.

The document – which condenses 1,300 pages to 59 – was announced by planning minister and MP for Tunbridge Wells Greg Clark. He stressed the local plan was the keystone of planning.

Hauliers fear private finance roads could cost them dear

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

FREIGHT companies have raised concerns over David Cameron's hopes of improving the road network with private funding.

They said while improvements were needed to tackle congestion, lorry drivers should not have to shoulder any additional costs.

It follows an announcement by the Prime Minister new major roads in Britain could be privatised, paving the way for a new generation of motorways funded by tolls. He said there needed to be innovative ways of funding to increase investment and reduce congestion.

"Road tolling is one option, but we are only considering this for new, not existing, capacity," he said.

"We need to look urgently at the options for getting large-scale private investment into the national roads network – from sovereign wealth funds, pension funds, and other investors."

PLANS: New roads could cost

The Department for Transport and the Treasury are due to carry out a feasibility study of new ownership and financing models.

Bosses at the Tunbridge Wells-based Freight Transport Association (FTA) said while they welcomed calls for an increase in investment, they warned it could discourage lorries from using certain roads.

FTA chief executive Theo de Pencier said road congestion was blighting the economy, but that additional costs should not be burdened on the lorry drivers and freight companies.

He said: "The freight industry will want to look at how these plans relate to existing transport taxes such as fuel duty and vehicle excise duty and how any new pricing structures can be developed to ensure the new capacity is utilised in the most efficient and effective way.

"Given that road users already pay £41 billion a year in taxes, charges and tolls, then any new cost cannot be in addition to this and must be a substitution for fuel duty."

While business leaders welcome the move amid concerns over potential toll costs, green campaigners voiced fears over increased gridlock, where vehicles would avoid toll roads and cram onto local highways.

A Kent spokesman for Friends of the Earth said: "Building and widening roads to tackle congestion is a dead-end policy that will simply lead to more traffic, more pollution – and even more gridlocked roads."

"The Prime Minister should be promoting alternatives to driving and reduce our transport system's reliance on expensive overseas oil."

Oddie goes Dodo to promote Earth Hour for eco-business

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

NATURE lover Bill Oddie is still a goodie after jumping at the chance to support a small Kent environmental organisation.

And Britain's most famous birdwatcher also issued a broadside at those major charities he believes cream off more than they should for admin and salary costs.

The Whitstable-based business is called Don't Do the Dodo, and boss Anthony Cooper was amazed when he got Oddie on board to make a record about saving power.

Mr Cooper said: "Bill was delighted to help us out. He said he is angry with some charities that appear to take a fortune in administration costs rather than spend it where it's intended."

Don't Do the Dodo wanted to do something to help mark Earth Hour, which is on Saturday, March 31, when individuals and organisations are encouraged to turn off lights for an hour from 8.30pm.

Mr Cooper said: "I asked Bill if he would record this song called Turn It Off. It is a bit whacky, but really gets the message over that we need to start turning things off in the home to save power."

"It is our contribution toward Earth Hour and it puts some fun into creating awareness for water conservation for the looming draught.

"Together with my wife Sheilah we are hoping to persuade people to download a free ringtone from the song as a show of unity for saving our resources and as a green talking point.

"Maybe if enough like it, there is a chance it could even go viral. Bill has agreed to be the voice of the dodo, which is a great boost."

Oddie said in the recording studio: "I wanted to support a small organisation like this because the money goes where they say it goes. It is not used up by all the back office nonsense."

"They are delivering a worthwhile message and it was great recording the song for them."

Mr Cooper said: "As a part of our marketing strategy, we will transparently donate 50 per cent of our profits to local environmental projects, with the final object of finding partners worldwide and repeating the same formula."

"The dodo remains in the zeitgeist as the icon for extinct creatures. The concept of Don't Do the Dodo is to establish a credible and transparent environmental edutainment brand, producing a new generation of environmentalists."

College students get cheap bus travel – for £520 a year

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

SIXTH formers and college students are to get subsidised bus travel – but it will cost £520 a year to buy a pass.

Kent County Council said this amounted to just £10 a week and was far cheaper than the actual cost of the travel card to the authority of £750, and the current travel expenses for 16 to 19-year-olds in education, which often costs as much as £900.

Schools and colleges are also able to subsidise the cost further for those eligible for bursary funding if they wish, although it is not yet known whether any are planning to do so.

The travel card will allow travel on buses across the county at all times, including holidays and weekends, and was given the green light by KCC cabinet members following a campaign calling for the Kent Freedom Pass – which serves children aged 11-16 for £100 a year – to be extended to 16 to 19-year-olds.

Should the scheme be included in the wider, statutory Kent Transport Policy, the cards will be available from September.

Kent Youth County Council member Paul Ayres said: "Having a card that could be used evenings and weekends, as well as daytimes, will make a real difference.

"It just shows we are being listened to and I think it will encourage more young people to get involved – knowing that their views count."

KCC cabinet member for education, learning and skills, Cllr Mike Whiting, said the card met many of the aspirations of young people who petitioned the county council last year.

Thousands of people added their signatures to the list, prompting a debate on post-16 travel at KCC.

Cllr Whiting said some students could get the card for an even lower cost.

He said: "Schools and colleges can use the bursary money they now get direct from government, a replacement for Education Maintenance Allowances, to further subsidise the cost of the card. Guidance will be issued to schools and colleges on the level of bursary subsidy they will be expected to pay to low-earning families."

Kim Blacker, from Northfleet Technology College, which recently trialled the post-16 travel pilot scheme, said the opportunity made a huge difference for some students.

"One said it was 'life saving', providing him with ability to seek part-time employment further afield from where he lives," she said.

Towns hope to catch eye of shopping queen Portas

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

TOWNS around Kent are queueing up to be chosen as one of Mary Portas's pilot town centres.

The retail guru and star of TV's Mary Queen of Shops launched the scheme earlier this year which will see 12 towns around the UK chosen for the pilot scheme.

Each will receive a grant of around £100,000 to turn round their town centres based on the recommendations of her report to government into the state of our high streets, published last year.

So far towns in Kent considering putting bids forward include Ashford, Dover, Folkestone, Maidstone, Tonbridge and Sheerness.

Each town has created a 'Town Team' of traders, businesses and local politicians to help come up with suggestions to revive their towns.

Ashford was one of the first to put in an application. A fortnight ago a meeting was held with various stakeholders to help come up with suggestions that will make their bid stand out.

The meeting was opened by Ashford MP Damian Green who stressed the need to come up with innovative and unified proposals.

Council leader Cllr Peter Wood said: "It was incredibly encouraging to see so many local businesses not only sharing bright and bold ideas on how to improve the town centre, but also showing their wholehearted support for Ashford and its future."

"I believe the Portas Pilot bid will serve as a catalyst for positive change and with our traders and residents we have the commitment and vision to see it through."

Around 350 towns around the country are bidding to be chosen as pilots.

The county town of Maidstone has also thrown its hat into the ring.

Cabinet member for economic development and transport, Cllr Malcolm Greer, said: "We have invested a lot of money into our high street and this bid, if successful, would enhance our offering to the public and bring community spirit back to the town."

Town Teams had to formally submit their bids by Friday, March 30, and are also required to produce a video about their town and how it can benefit from being in the pilot.

Sheerness is making three main recommendations on improving its town centre, mainly based on the ideas put forward by Portas.

They include relocating the market into the centre of the town, using vacant shops to start new entrepreneurial businesses, and creating a centre for art and community groups to help establish a brand for the town.

Chairman of Sheerness' Town Team is Pete Giffen from the fashion shop O.S.O.U.

He said: "We hope these ideas will give us enough scope to demonstrate that we're looking at a scheme to benefit the whole town, our local community, traders, businesses and visitors. We are working to a very tight timescale to get the bid submitted so it's all hands on deck."

"In an age when high streets have to compete with large out-of-town retail parks and shopping on the internet, it is clear town centres are going to have to change."

Cllr Wood added: "The nature of high streets has changed. People don't go shopping in the old way they used to. They go for a day out."

HIGH HOPES: Ashford is just one of several Kent towns after Mary Portas funding

ACCIDENT

Crash pair fight for their lives

TWO people were left fighting for their lives after a rush hour smash on the A2.

The accident happened on Monday at 8.20am on the coastbound Adisham A2 slip-road, B2046 at Barham - known locally as the Adisham Road.

A white transit van and a black Hyundai Jetz were involved.

The driver of the van, a 52-year-old man, was taken to a London hospital.

His injuries were described as being life-threatening.

The driver of the car, a woman in her 30s from Folkestone, was also taken to a London hospital. Her injuries were said to be serious, but she was in a stable condition.

It's such a waste – anger at closure of recycling centres

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

PLANS to close two recycling centres will lead to more cases of fly-tipping, say campaigners.

Kent County Council's cabinet has approved the closure of the recycling centre near the village of Hawkinge as part of a review of 19 recycling sites in the county.

A proposal to close the recycling centre at Richborough near Sandwich was discussed at a meeting of the full council on Thursday.

The closure plans have angered residents who say the council's consultation process was skewed in order to give County Hall waste managers the result they wanted.

Jeffery Loffman from Richborough Action Group said: "The consultation document has flawed data and the consultation itself has been flawed. There are so many residents in Sandwich who feel strongly that they don't want to see the centre closed and it feels like KCC is overriding them."

"Some of the figures in the consultation they have used are inaccurate. For example, in Sandwich they say 150 homes are affected. By that they may mean the 15-20 minute guideline to travel to a waste site, but the actual figure is much bigger than that."

The Richborough recycling centre is due to close by the summer of 2013. After that residents will have to travel to either Margate or Deal to get rid of their recyclable waste.

Mr Loffman said: "Margate is too far away and in Deal it could create real problems with queuing which will just put people off recycling. We already see incidents of fly-tipping in the area and we are worried it will get worse."

"We are not satisfied other options have been considered, such as reducing opening hours or reducing the types of material that are deposited."

Nearly 3,500 responses were made to KCC's countywide consultation on waste management which ended in February. Protect Kent says the questionnaire was badly publicised and questions that described centres targeted for closure as "uneconomic" would inevitably get the answer the council wanted from people not affected.

The county council says a new transfer recycling centre in Ashford will help deal with much of the waste in east Kent.

The Richborough campaigners have handed in a petition to County Hall with 1,300 signatures opposing the closure.

KCC says it is investing £18m in its recycling sites over the next three years and the closures are part of a rationalisation programme.

Cabinet member for environment, highways and waste, Cllr Bryan Sweetland, said: "This service review has been comprehensive and the consultation has contributed to my understanding of the public's view. I am particularly mindful of the concern regarding fly-tipping and KCC is committed to taking a robust approach against environmental crime."

ADVERTISING

Christmas 'midget' advert lands nightspot in hot water

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A NIGHTCLUB has apologised for advertising a Christmas Eve party night with 'midgets'.

The term has become offensive, and Bar Fusion in Tunbridge Wells says it is sorry it promoted the event on its Facebook page in December last year.

A single complaint was made to the Advertising Standards Authority, which investigated and has just announced its findings.

The ASA said: "Two issues were investigated of which two were upheld. Claims on Bar Fusion's Facebook page, for a Christmas event at a bar, viewed on 9 December 2011, featured text which stated

'CHRISTMAS EVE WITH MIDGETS! FOR THE 1ST TIME IN TUNBRIDGE WELLS THIS CHRISTMAS EVE PARTY WITH OUR VERY OWN XMAS MIDGETS that's right MIDGETS!!!!!!! ENTRY JUST £5 ALL NIGHT'.

"Beneath this text was an image which included the text 'To you & friends, from Santa's club. December 24th. XMAS EVE With Our Xmas Midgets'."

The complaint, that had to be acted upon by the watchdog, claimed the use of the word 'midgets', was offensive to short statured people; and the ad was irresponsible, because it reinforced negative attitudes towards short people.

Bar Fusion said it was never its intention to cause offence and with hindsight it felt it was right to apologise for doing so.

It said the night and artists were booked by an outside promoter who used the term. It therefore believed it was acceptable to use the term and that it would not cause offence.

The advert was removed once it was obvious it had caused offence.

And Facebook told the ASA it was not a paid-for Facebook advertisement. The social network site said the content was entirely user generated and it did not monitor, review or verify the claims.

The ASA acknowledged Bar Fusion did not intend to use the ad in future. In its finding, the watchdog considered the "ad portrayed the presence of individuals of short stature as an attraction and source of entertainment".

And it added: "We therefore considered the ad was likely to cause serious and widespread offence. We also considered the ad promoted negative attitudes towards individuals of short stature and was therefore irresponsible."

It concluded the ad breached its code for social responsibility, harm and offence, and ordered the club not to use the ad again in its current form.

Tax dodge row

KENT Lib Dem MEP Sharon Bowles says cash raised by Sport Relief pales by comparison to the tax being dodged by multinationals operating in the Third World. "Countries in the developing world are owed far more in corporate tax."

HEADLINE ACTS: Bob Dylan (right) and Peter Gabriel (far right) are two of the stars who will be performing at the Hop Farm this summer

ENTERTAINMENT

Veteran Bob Dylan heads big names at Hop Farm Festival

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

THE man behind the Hop Farm Festival says he would book veteran rocker Bob Dylan "every year" if he could, after confirming him as headliner for this year's three-day music extravaganza.

After Prince stole the show last year, his Minnesota compatriot will join Peter Gabriel and indie rockers Suede at the top of the bill at the Pad-dock Wood venue.

Dylan is no stranger to the festival – he headlined just two years ago.

The festival runs over June 29-July 1 in what is shaping up to be one of the most competitive summers for years for people's time and attention.

Not only are music festival chiefs pushing out the boat in a bid to cash in on Glastonbury's one-year absence, but there are events for the Olympics, the Queen's Diamond Jubilee, and football's Euro 2012 to contend with, too.

Other acts confirmed this week for the Hop Farm include Damien Rice, Primal Scream, My Morning Jacket, Maximo Park, Patti Smith, The Stranglers, Dr John, Joan Armatrading, Billy Ocean, The Psychedelic Furs, The Jezabels, Benjamin Francis Leftwich, Frightened Rabbit, Tom Vek, White Denim, and a host of others.

Some 30,000 fans are expected for each day.

Vince Power, the music mogul who owns the event and promotes it, said: "Bob Dylan is a fantastic act and helps form what we believe is a great line-up this year. There is a lot of competition out there for people's time and money this year and I don't think any festival has sold out yet. But we're hopeful of getting close to it."

"I know we had Bob headline a few years ago, but I'd have him back every year if I could."

He admitted to having been involved in talks with The Who at the end of last year about a headline slot, but that deal fell through. Stevie Wonder had also been a possibility, before he opted to perform at Bestival on the Isle of Wight.

One of the last major festivals this summer to unveil its line-up, Mr Power also confirmed the first 10,000 weekend tickets would sell for the discounted cost of £150 in a bid to encourage early sales. Children under 12 will go free in a bid to encourage families to attend.

Mr Power had originally planned to unveil the line-up in November, but various issues with headliners prompted a delay.

The Hop Farm Festival shot up the pecking order last summer when it served up Prince, Morrissey and The Eagles. Other acts included the likes of Lou Reed, Brandon Flowers and Iggy Pop.

Power said more big names would be forthcoming over the coming weeks. He estimated there would be around 100 acts in total performing.

Scores on the doors reveal hygiene rating of food outlets

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmeia.co.uk

RESTAURANTS, pubs and food shops have been told they could boost their business if they make the most of a new food hygiene scheme.

If they achieve high standards of hygiene they can then tell everyone with a new sign which shows a rating from zero to five, with the top score being 'very good'. A zero means an urgent improvement is required by the shop, café, takeaway, pub or restaurant.

Under the new National Food Hygiene Rating Scheme inspectors give each food retailer and restaurant a score out of five for its standards of cleanliness and hygiene.

If an establishment is not showing off its score, either the venue has not yet had an inspection or it is ashamed of its rating. So far Ashford, Canterbury, Maidstone, Tonbridge and Malling and Sevenoaks are migrating to the new Scores on the Doors scheme, while Swale, Shepway, Dover and Thanet are introducing the ratings from scratch.

Tunbridge Wells, Dartford and Gravesham are already operating the scheme.

It is not optional, and every food shop and eatery will be subject to inspection.

It has been introduced in the UK by the Food Standards Agency to reduce food-related illnesses that annually affect one million people a year, killing 500.

POINTS SYSTEM: Inspectors will score retailers

Cllr Jessamy Blandford, Ashford council's portfolio holder for environment, said: "We believe shops and restaurants can attract new customers and win new business by working hard to achieve a good rating and then making sure the public knows how well they have done."

In Tonbridge and Malling, Cllr Howard Rogers, cabinet member for environmental services, added: "Businesses are already legally required to meet hygiene regulations, so it makes sense for those who achieve a good rating to tell customers about it. Good food hygiene means a good rating and a good rating is good for business."

"We were pleased with the way Scores on the Doors worked and we are confident that the new scheme will be equally successful, both in keeping the public safe and in helping businesses win new customers."

Advertiser's Announcement

Seagulls are a familiar sight in Britain's coastal towns, but as splendid as they look, they can carry a host of nasty organisms making them a potential threat to our health. Now with the added threat of bird flu, salmonella poisoning, botulism and even the deadly e-coli bacteria, which are just a few according to the RSPB.

But they are not only a danger to health, they can become aggressive when nesting and have been known to bombard people who venture too near their chicks.

John Couzens of Gullbuster, knows a lot about seagulls. In the 20 years he has been removing them from residential and industrial buildings, he has seen the enormous damage they can cause. He said: "Flat roofs, chimneys and other housing structures provide ideal sites for seagulls to nest. They leave debris and sometimes dead chicks, which attract parasites in gutters and unused chimneys. Even worse, if the gas flue is obstructed you risk carbon monoxide poisoning."

John also runs a roofing firm which he started in 1982. As he was frequently asked to remove seagulls from ridge tiles and chimney stacks, he decided to find out everything he could about them.

John contacted the RSPB and the learning curve began.

John said: "All wildlife is protected by law, but as herring gulls (seagulls) and lesser black back gulls pose such a health and safety hazard, the nest and eggs can be removed from a property by an authorised person."

"We don't hurt, trap or kill them, just make it impossible for them to nest. All the products we use to seagull-proof properties are completely harmless to gulls and other birds."

Gullbuster provides the service to local councils, government buildings and residential homes and has a 95 percent initial success rate. The firm will return to remove gulls if they should come back at another time.

Prices start from as little as £25, so if you are troubled by seagulls on your own property, call the experts at Gullbuster for a free estimate.

Had enough of seagulls?!

Nesting on your chimney stack, calling out from the ridge tiles or bombarding you in the garden when the chicks are born? Well you don't have to put up with it anymore!

KENT REMEMBERED

HARD TIMES: Ron Leagas, now 87, lied to join the Army in World War Two and ended up in Normandy

Mum's cooking put Ron in firing line in France

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

A NEW book focuses on the children of World War Two who not only had to survive the bombs raining down on Britain's cities, but joined in with the fighting.

In his book Blitz Kids, Sean Longden interviews men and women who were teenagers at the time of the conflict.

One of them is Ron Leagas, who now lives in Ramsgate. The 87-year-old grew up in Leyton in London, which was heavily bombed when the Luftwaffe targeted the East End.

He said: "I always remember the first time the sirens went off. I was playing in the street and my aunt came running out of her house and rushed all the kids into a shelter at the bottom of the garden."

"I can remember being 14 and walking out of the door one day and bombs were coming down in rows. Luckily they landed in a cemetery opposite our house."

Mr Leagas was too young to join the Army in 1941, when he was 16, but after a row with his mother he found his way to the recruiting office.

He said: "I wasn't desperate to join the Army. I was stuck doing a building job and I just got fed up on a hot day."

"I went home in a mood and had an argument about the stew mum had made."

"I said I wanted egg and chips and we had a row and she ended up throwing the stew at me. So I went off saying I was going to join the Army."

The veteran had to forge a note from his father to the recruiting sergeant saying he was old enough to join up.

He said: "At first he said I was too young so I told him that my ID had been lost when our house got bombed."

"I came back with this 'note' from my father who I said was in the café over the road. The sergeant let me in for being cheeky, he said."

Mr Leagas trained at Howe Barracks in Canterbury, preparing for the invasion of Europe. He was the driver of a Bren gun carrier on the beaches of Normandy.

He said: "That was a terrible day; I was about third carrier onto the beach, but the first one got blown up straight away.

"We had to carry on pushing forward but refused to drive over the bodies, so they made us clear them up with a shovel."

"It was a terrible job."

Mr Leagas continued to fight in France until he was injured by an enemy mortar.

He said: "I heard a mortar gun warming up and the next thing I remember I woke up in hospital."

Mr Leagas met Sean Longden at the War and Peace show held at Paddock Wood.

Mr Longden said: "I was inspired to write the book by the story of my own grandfather who left his home in Queens Park and joined the Army aged 16 during World War One."

"What is less well known is the story of the underage volunteers during World War Two."

OPINION

Medway a city in all but name, despite our bid being rejected

The future is bright for Medway, and we will not be knocked off track argues Mike O'Brien, a Conservative councillor on Medway Council

MEDWAY was one of 25 areas to bid for city status as part of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee celebrations this year.

Even though the bookmakers had us running a close second, at 6-1, we were not successful this time, beaten to the title by Chelmsford, Perth and St Asaph.

Whilst this is disappointing news, the City of Medway remains our aspiration – we are a city in all but name with our historic cathedral, four universities and a diverse economy.

Each of the five towns has its own distinct identity under one umbrella – Medway. It's what makes our area unique.

The bid was an excellent opportunity to showcase all that is great about the area – just look at the positive national coverage Medway received for around 5p per person – it is helping to establish Medway firmly on the map.

Whilst the vast majority of residents supported the bid, there were a small minority of vocal opponents. Most were not opposed to city status in principle, only disagreed on when and which part of Medway should receive it.

But the Government guidelines were clear in that the application needed to be for the whole local authority area.

We can take pride in the efforts that were made by everyone in Medway including local businesses, newspapers, schools and the community, who have worked tirelessly to promote the area and can take pride in the knowledge that Medway is a fantastic and safe place to live and work.

We have 28 days of free festivals, the most in the South East, and 2012 is going to be a Year of Celebration with the bi-centenary of Dickens' birth and the Queen's Diamond Jubilee playing a key part.

This will culminate in a River Festival in June and six beacons being lit across the area.

Medway has a rich heritage and close historic ties with the Armed Forces, which includes the Royal Engineers who will be celebrating their 200th anniversary in Gillingham this year.

It is also a centre for sporting excellence, with Medway Park now playing host to world championship events and as a pre-Olympic training camp for Senegal, Congo and Chad.

In August it will be holding the British Transplant Games.

We can see the regeneration

We are building a Medway that our children will enjoy of the area taking shape before our eyes, with the new road infrastructure completed and new housing being developed, such as at Victory Quays.

There are now some 600 companies employing 6,000 people on the Medway City Estate alone and we are justifiably proud of the 12,000 students studying in our four universities.

We have wonderful countryside right on our doorstep, which is why the council is leading the fight against a Thames estuary airport.

We have lots to be proud of in Medway; we will not be knocked off track. We are building a Medway that our children will enjoy and prosper in, let us celebrate Medway and all that we have achieved and continue to achieve, together.

Parent power wins out on grammar places

THIS week saw the historic moment the district of Sevenoaks was finally granted the grammar school places its politicians and communities have been fighting to have for years.

It marked a significant moment in the history of selective schooling, where there has been no major expansion of grammars for 50 years. While some who oppose the selective system may see this as a knock to the campaign against such schools, Kent is a selective county and therefore whether for or against it, there needs to be provision for children who pass the 11-plus.

This was never an argument about whether selective schooling is right or wrong, this was about ensuring the right provision for our youngsters.

Estuary airport is a done deal

WASTE an opportunity and ensure High Speed 2 does not have proper connections with Heathrow.

Claims to wish to explore all options for increased air capacity?

Except, of course, for expansion at Stansted; except for Gatwick; except for expansion at Heathrow.

Ignore calls from many prominent business leaders – including those in the aviation industry – to do so?

Turn down a substantial financial offer from Sir Richard Branson to help pay for the expansion of Heathrow?

Narrows it down a bit doesn't it?

Can Messrs Cameron and Johnson convince us they have not already made their minds up about the Thames estuary option?

Bill Stevens, Faversham

Public want truth, not lies

IN THE interests of all of us campaigning to stop this so-called estuary airport, the Government should not be running this country... they can't even answer people's emails.

I'm aware they get thousands of emails, letters, but they can't even answer the people who put them in office.

Never again am I going to vote for any political party, all they do is lie and stab you in the back.

Cameron said in 2010 election manifesto that there would be no estuary airport – lies again.

When will these people stop lying to us, the public?

Then they have secret talks, saying it's not in the public's interest for us to know. No Mr Cameron, it is in my interest.

Campaigns are hard enough without politics involved in them, so wake up government, give some answers.

No estuary airport.

Town vision is a blind alley

I ATTENDED the presentation at the Civic Centre about the Mary Portas project.

I would like to reflect the concerns expressed by some members of local business that the feeling one gets coming into the town of Ashford is not what is expected given the immense publicity given nationally to the shared space and the logo 'Ashford is the place to be'.

I attended a conference in the town some 17 years ago.

Our guest speaker was Richard Branson, the Virgin boss. He gave a warning to tackle the economic development of Ashford now because when Ebbleton station opened it would be too late. I am sorry to say this has come true.

Some 24 years on Ashford Borough Council and I have been to many presentations hearing what should be done for Ashford to prosper.

Here we are in 2012, and we are still waiting for links from the station via the outlet village and the town centre, the education area, the transport hub and the commercial centre.

So far nothing.

Now we depend on a handout of £100,000 to revamp Pall Mall shopping precinct.

We were told Ashford needs good schools, good leisure centres, an athletic stadium and a good department store to attract people to move to the area. We have them and if these people are here they should be shopping in Ashford.

I don't think they do.

May I add my 24 years have been on the opposition bench of the council.

No more visions, but more actions.

Make Ashford a place people want to come and bring the family and enjoy a lovely day

Drivers must vote change in

I THOROUGHLY agree with Brian Mooney of the Fair Deal for the Motorist Campaign, as he stated that nearly £50 billion is collected annually in direct motoring taxes, yet only about £4bn is reinvested in new or improved roads.

Yet this greedy government is not satisfied that drivers are paying enough and wants to charge us for new roads which inevitably will lead to their goal of nationwide road tolls.

To put this into perspective, about 85 per cent of passenger miles are by car, rising to about 92 per cent if we include bus/coach travel, with the small balance by rail.

Yet a complete new rail system (Crossrail) is being constructed under London (which already has a good public transport system) at a cost of £15bn and proposals to spend a start-up £20bn on HS2, which will only be affordable to a very limited customer base and will rely on state subsidies forever.

Private rail companies receive about £5bn in subsidies, yet we still have some of the highest ticket prices in Europe.

If people want to drive on good roads, have reasonable fuel costs and get a more balanced transport expenditure, then in both local and general elections, they have to think beyond the three major parties when it comes to voting.

Otherwise regardless of party, it will just be more of the same.

Responding to hidden threat

THERE are 800,000 people living with dementia in the UK, yet a new report by the Alzheimer's Society shows that three quarters of us don't feel the country is geared up to deal with dementia.

The Dementia 2012 report has found that almost half a million people with dementia are battling depression, loneliness or anxiety.

Not only do they face a struggle for a diagnosis and support from the health and social care system, but everyday things we all take for granted – getting to the shops, spending time with friends and family, getting money from the bank, going on holiday – are made difficult by the lack of understanding of dementia in our communities.

We must face up to the fact that people with dementia and their carers are being failed.

In the 1950s attitudes to cancer changed, and in the 1980s we did the same for Aids.

Now is the time to begin a movement on dementia.

From Plymouth to Preston and from the boardroom to bus drivers, we all need to respond to the dementia challenge.

Advice pays dividends as mystery gets solved

Q I WROTE to you after my husband died and I found payments had been going from his Barclays account to a firm called Readycredit. I had no replies from the firms you identified who have Readycredit as part of their name, so I tried the last resort you suggested and traced the payments through Barclays to Santander. They looked into it and I received almost the full amount back, which was very welcome. Thank you very much indeed for your help.

A It is always good to hear that advice has worked and a reader is better off. You found from bank statements your husband's Barclays account had been paying £13 a month to a mysterious firm called Readycredit. These payments, totalling £2,743, were completely unexplained, and after your husband died, nobody contacted you or his bank to ask why they had stopped. I found a number of firms with offshoots or departments called Readycredit. They included Arcadia Group, which is linked to Burton Menswear, and Viking Collection, which is linked to Santander-owned Abbey National. The real problem was the payments were made by standing order. All Barclays knew was the sort code and account number to which the money was sent. So, top marks to Barclays for tracing where the cash ended up, and I am pleased it found its way back to you.

Q MY husband and I live in a house with 18 acres of pasture land attached, used for our own horses and for growing hay for our own use. We have a barn and stables, and have been here 18 years after buying the property and land as one lot. We are now thinking of downsizing, but I have heard to my horror that capital gains tax could be due on any profit made on the sale of the land, even though it is part of our home. Is this a recent ruling?

A THERE has been no change in the rules, and I am afraid you may well be facing a bill for capital gains tax. Your best bet is to try to minimise it by claiming the allowances and reliefs that are available. The basic rule is that we are all allowed one home that is free from gains tax when we sell it. In official language, this exemption includes any garden or grounds that are necessary for the "reasonable enjoyment" of the property, having regard to its size and character. The taxman will not bat an eyelid at land up to 5,000sq m, but 18 acres is more than 72,000sq m. You will need a professional negotiator – perhaps a local accountant working with a valuer – to try to show that the land matches the size and character of your house. Since keeping horses is probably not nowadays seen as being necessary for the reasonable enjoyment of your home, I am not optimistic. But you can reduce the tax by claiming the annual gains tax exemption, and relief for any improvements and the legal and other costs linked to the sale.

Q I AM named as executor in my cousin's will, but we lost touch years ago. What is the procedure for resigning as executor while he is still alive?

A IF YOU cannot contact your cousin, there is no way to tell him that you no longer want this responsibility. You can only wait until he dies and then decline to act as executor.

Q I HAVE been left £1,000 of War Loan. How do I encash this, and is it worth £1,000?

A War Loan is money borrowed by the Government, originally to fund the World War One. It pays 3.5pc interest and trades on the stock market, currently at about £840 for a £1,000 certificate. Your bank's stockbroking department can sell it for you.

Q I AM sending you a letter I received from Mr Ling Huan, of the Wing Lung Bank in Hong Kong. It is obviously a trick, but I thought other readers might be amused, and there is always the chance someone may be tempted to respond. Does this bank actually exist?

A THE Wing Lung Bank really does exist, but I doubt if the same can be said for Ling Huan. Last year another reader also sent me a letter he received from Ling Huan, spinning the same yarn about how a customer had died, leaving a huge amount of cash unclaimed in his account. The reader was asked to pose as the deceased's next of kin, claim the money, and split it with Ling Huan – exactly the same scheme as proposed in the letter you have received. Nobody should fall for this. You are right. It is a trick. Anyone who replies will be milked for legal fees, taxes and bribes. And, of course, there is no treasure trove of unclaimed cash, just as there is no Ling Huan.

Stop smoking for your financial good health

The health benefits of stopping smoking are well documented, but those who kick the habit can also find themselves quids in. ADAM AIKEN reports

WE have recently had the latest No-Smoking Day – the annual event when people are encouraged to pack in the habit.

There is rarely a shortage of pressure on smokers to change their behaviour. Scare tactics are often used, but campaigners can also opt for gentler approaches.

What is usually consistent, however, is the content of these campaigns, with a strong focus on health.

But on top of the obvious health grounds, there are also good financial reasons to stop smoking.

For a start, there is the increasing cost of tobacco. Against the backdrop of higher living costs, wage freezes and high unemployment, it is easy to see just how much smoking can make an ever-bigger dent in your pocket.

Following the recent budget, a packet of 20 cigarettes now costs an average of nearly £7.50. That means someone smoking 20 a day will spend about £2,750 a year on the habit.

If national insurance and tax are taken into account, a basic-rate taxpayer needs to earn approaching £4,000 a year to pay for it.

Heavier smokers, of course, will spend even more than this.

But even if you are a 'casual' smoker and you puff away a lot less than this, you could still find yourself stung financially.

For a start, some home insurers will ask if you are a smoker because homes with smokers in them are often considered to be more at risk of catching fire.

But the real savings often come with life insurance policies.

According to price-comparison service Moneysupermarket.com, a smoker can pay thousands of pounds extra for life insurance and critical illness cover compared with their non-smoking peers.

So added to the cost of not having to buy tobacco any more, the savings can quickly mount up for those who give up smoking.

Emma Walker, head of protection at Moneysupermarket, said: "Not only can smokers reap the medical benefits of kicking the habit, they can avoid letting their hard-earned cash go up in smoke, too."

"With significant savings to be made, those who make the decision to quit should shop around for the best insurance deal to suit their circumstances."

NO IFS OR BUTTS: Kicking the habit can save serious cash on insurance costs

TOP TIPS

■ As with all insurance products, do not automatically plump for the lowest premiums without looking at what you are getting for your money. Check the smallprint. Although stopping smoking is likely to lower your premiums on a like-for-like basis, choosing what cover to buy should not be simply about price.

■ Take care when filling out your application form and make sure your answers are truthful and correct. Give all your relevant personal information and medical history. If you don't, you risk any claim being rejected.

■ As with a will, always review your life insurance and/or critical illness cover if your circumstances change. A new job, getting married or divorced or starting a family might all be events that impact your requirements when it comes to taking out protection.

■ Don't assume your bank will give you the best deal. It might do, of course, but there are plenty of comparison sites, brokers and standalone life insurance providers who might offer you lower premiums for the same (or better) cover.

Moneysupermarket's research demonstrates some of the savings people can make by stopping smoking.

A 30-year-old man looking to take out £150,000-worth of combined critical illness cover and life insurance could save at least £5,490 with Aviva over 25 years if he stopped smoking. A woman wanting the same level of cover could save at least £2,740 with Ageas Protect.

A word of warning, though: insurance companies consider ex-smokers to be "non-smokers" only a year after they have given up. You cannot stop today and immediately qualify for lower premiums.

Matt Morris, senior policy adviser at life insurance broker Lifesearch, said it was important to shop around for a better deal once you have become a non-smoker, but he warned that other changes in your health meant there was no certainty that you would be able to cut the overall cost.

He said cheaper premiums were not certain, as they also depended on age and health, but there was a very good chance that they would fall.

"It is important to make sure you have a new policy in place before cancelling the existing one, as a new policy could turn up some nasty surprises in underwriting and may even be declined if your health has

Business Week

Your business is our business

'Accentuating the positive will boost trade and investment'

RECENT weeks have seen an encouraging number of positive surveys about the UK's trade, manufacturing, construction and service sectors.

Interest rates are at an all-time low; however, this is tempered by difficult trading in some parts of the retail sector, escalating fuel prices and, for some companies, difficulties with raising business finance. The continued uncertainty within the Eurozone also affects the UK's economic success.

Economists are not short with supplying reams of economic data, but how are we supposed to interpret this?

Indeed, the Governor of the Bank of England, Sir Mervyn King, has said that for much of 2012 we will most probably see a 'zigzagging' in positive and negative quarterly growth.

Personally, I do detect some shoots of optimism for the UK economy; however, data is 'data', and as a business-woman I am passionate about how we can make Kent's economy better.

'Economic success' is an abstract; we're actually talking about 'people success'. So, who is responsible for contributing to 'people success'?

Well, of course it's the Government, local authorities in the form of Kent County Council and Medway Council, district councils, business-support organisations, schools, colleges, universities and, not least, the private sector.

But we all have a responsibility in 'people success' and, to ensure this, I believe we must foster a greater sense of positivity and collaboration.

We only need to look at the UK unem-

Olga D'Silva, head of Zên Languages and chair of IoD Kent's International Business Forum, gives her perspective on the state of the county's economy and what its prospects might be ployment figures published in March 2012. There are 2.67 million people unemployed, of which, alarmingly, 22.5 per cent are young people aged 16 to 24. We must do everything we can to halt this statistic, particularly youth unemployment; we cannot afford to have a lost generation.

In fact, Sir Mervyn, when interviewed by young journalists as part of the BBC's School Report, said: "It's far easier being the Governor of the Bank of England than being unemployed."

So, what are we doing to make the Kent economy stronger?

In March, for example, I was privileged to attend two events, one highlighting Kent as a great business location and the other supporting young Kent entrepreneurs.

At the Kent Foundation For Young Entrepreneurs event, an initiative backed by KCC, it was good to meet young people who have already set up in business, and as the 'mature' business community we learned how we can support them more, including through mentoring. Indeed, IoD Kent complements the work of the Kent Foundation through the Kent Association Of Young Entrepreneurs.

Both initiatives explore ways of helping young people to succeed in business, but Kevin Lynes, KCC cabinet member for economic development and regeneration, said: "We must do more to encourage entrepreneurial activity."

At the Locate in Kent event, we learned how businesses can become 'business champions' to promote Kent as a "21st-century location to live and work". I can endorse this; I love living and working in Kent, but we all need to champion why it's so good to be in Kent in our business dealings.

There is plenty of other business support; however, I do recognise that many companies are confused about the business support offerings in Kent.

Are you aware, for example, that you can receive a subsidy to take on an apprentice? Did you know the Government recently launched the National Export Challenge via UK Trade & Investment supporting the SME sector (small and medium-sized enterprises) to trade internationally?

You may have heard of Enterprise Europe Network or various European initiatives, including 2 Seas Trade, but how do you access these to help your business?

KCC has recognised Kent's business-support needs to be more coherent. So, at the Kent 2020 Exhibition in April, you can learn all about the Backing Kent Business initiative, as well as the launch of Kent International Business.

These are backed by stakeholders and partners including IoD Kent through the International Business Forum, sponsored by HSBC, Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, Locate in Kent, BSK-CiC (Business Support Kent), UK Trade & Investment and universities.

In March, we saw David Cameron and Barack Obama accentuating the positive in the UK-US relationship and we must capitalise on this for our UK-US business dealings. Indeed, in September 2012, KCC's international team is leading a trade mission to Virginia and Boston, which you could take part in.

I strongly believe that we can help ourselves by taking positive actions, adopting a 'can-do' attitude and a greater sense of collaboration.

That way, we won't have to try to interpret economic data – we can create our own economic data and all help to ensure the economic health, wealth and success of the people of 'Kent plc'.

Numbers add up for charity that takes on accountancy firm to balance books

CREASEYS, the Tunbridge Wells accountancy firm, has been appointed as auditor to the charity Compaid.

The Paddock Wood group, which celebrated its 25th anniversary last year, supports disabled people by both getting them involved with computers and providing much-needed transport solutions.

Compaid offers a range of practical services, using information technology and other resources, to enable disabled adults and children in and around Kent to maximise their social, creative, learning and employment opportunities.

Creaseys has many years of experience of acting for registered charities and not-for-profit organisations and understands the culture and aims of such groups.

"We were delighted to have been appointed as Compaid's auditor," said Roger Ward, heads of the Creaseys charities unit.

"We work with a variety of charities and it's nice to develop a partnership with one so close to our offices."

Stephen Elsdon, chief executive of Compaid, said: "Creaseys is well respected locally, but it also has good national and international reach, and that particularly attracted us."

Mr Ward said his experience of handling assignments in the voluntary sector enabled him to adopt an approach he considered essential to modern accountancy – the ability to listen to and understand clients' wants and to care for their needs.

He said: "We are looking forward to working with Compaid and supporting them in the important work they do."

Web-developer after Collabor8tors who need help to get their message across CHATHAM web-developer Netsite is on the hunt for organisations, particularly 'not-for-profit' groups and charities, to pioneer the use of online communities that allow people to communicate and collaborate.

Netsite, established 14 years ago, has already worked successfully with NHS South East Coast and NHS West Kent on projects such as the Learning Network and Healthy Passport Club.

Now the Netsite team wants to encourage charities to try out a new application called Collabor8tor that can bring a range of benefits in a cost-effective way.

Managing director Paul Duthoit said: "We are willing to work with organisations with a limited budget and, in the early days for pioneers, only make a charge to cover our costs, in order to spread the word about Collabor8tor. For instance, housing associations wanting to set up an online community would find the tool really useful to enable residents to communicate, discuss, learn and share information quickly and easily.

"It is called managed social/ collaborative networking – we are creating a platform with controlled access that enables groups of employees and customers to collaborate and improve services."

www.netsite.co.uk offers a range of services from bespoke website design through to content-managed e-recruitment systems.

The company has clients including the NHS, Rochester Avionic Archives, Crewsaver and The Historic Dockyard Chatham.

'Policies ride roughshod over Coalition's green credentials'

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE Government's stated commitment to protecting the environment has been exposed as a sham by the Budget, say campaigners who highlight "an economic path which locks us into unsustainable, high-carbon, short-term growth".

They say that many parts of Kent have been put under severe threat by policies put forward by Chancellor George Osborne in his 2012 statement.

Proposals to expand airport capacity in the South East – including the possibility of an environmentally-damaging hub in the Thames estuary – have also come under fire.

Martin Harper, Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) conservation director, said: "George Osborne's plan for growth clearly involves building more infrastructure, more roads and more runways, but this must be compatible with the green economy we have been promised so many times by this government."

"In the autumn statement last year, Mr Osborne set out a plan for short-sighted economic growth based on the mistaken belief that environmental protection is a burden on business."

"In his Budget speech he has continued to commit us to that path, locking us into an unsustainable economic plan that fails to take into account the very real value of our wildlife and countryside."

The RSPB added that environmental safeguards in no way hindered positive economic development.

Steve Gilbert, conservation programme manager for RSPB South East, said: "As a result of safeguards such as the Habitats Regulations, developers, planners and conservationists have worked together to find creative FLIGHT OF FANCY? The Government has said that plans for a giant airport in the wildlife-rich Thames estuary are to be considered in its review of aviation policy solutions to development that could otherwise potentially damage protected areas.

"Under the Habitats Regulations a major new port development, London Gateway, is taking place in the middle of the Thames while safeguarding the area's incredible and heavily-protected wildlife."

"Our government has pledged to halt biodiversity loss by the end of the decade and has also set itself tough targets on carbon emissions."

"Any proposals that would allow an airport to be built on the wildlife-rich mudflats of north Kent would blast a hole through these promises."

"The area is home to hundreds of thousands of wintering wetland birds and enjoys the highest level of legal protection available."

"It is of global environmental significance, a fact that has helped see off several previous proposals for airports in the area. The Government's own groundbreaking Natural Ecosystems Assessment unveiled last year highlighted the economic importance of green spaces and wildlife-rich sites like the Thames estuary."

"Politicians have promised us a new 'green economy' so many times that some of us even started believing it."

"We agree that development is necessary if the UK is to remain competitive, we agree that our economy needs to grow to enable all of us to prosper. But this must not happen at the cost of our environment."

The Government is to release full details of its review of the Habitats Regulations – the most important system of protection for wildlife-rich habitat – and this week unveiled reform of the planning system.

Jamie Weir, of CPRE Protect Kent, said: "Despite initially snubbing the idea of increased airport capacity in the South East, the Government seems to have now done a U-turn on it."

"If airports within the UK better allocate their slots and utilise smart-hubbing, we can avoid an unnecessary and costly development that is unlikely to bring economic prosperity yet could destroy a huge amount of our countryside."

"The idea that we must build a new airport in the South East is incredibly short-sighted and fails to take account of the powerful arguments we have for not developing any new aviation capacity."

Do you dread the PowerPoint call?

A NEW concept in visual presentation for business is being pioneered by a Maidstone company.

Vidoons says it provides an alternative to traditional slide-show-orientated company gatherings as well as offering multi-media opportunities to firms.

"We're on a mission to save the world from death by PowerPoint," says the company's promotional literature.

The company creates animations, caricatures and cartoons which can form part of slide-shows, along with video, music and voice-overs.

These can be used for presentations, websites and videos.

The company says its service is unique – so a new word had to be coined to describe it.

Vidoons is the brainchild of Patrick Blower, a cartoonist who has drawn for The Daily Telegraph, The Guardian and the London Evening Standard, and former BBC producer and film-maker Graham Majin.

The company put its videos online to attract its initial trade.

"There's nothing quite like what we do anywhere in the world," said Mr Blower.

"Vidoons – a mixture of video and cartooning is unique – so we had to invent a new word."

A Vidoon posted on YouTube recently gained 60,000 hits in just a few months and law firms, universities, environmental organisations and the London Philharmonic Orchestra are among its clients.

ACCORDING TO VIDOONS...

- A survey found that 33 per cent of respondents dreaded creating a presentation while 29 per cent dreaded sitting through one.
- Twenty per cent said they would prefer going to the dentist.
- A political party, the Anti-PowerPoint Party, has been formed in Switzerland to ban PowerPoint, which, it claims, wastes more than £200 billion a year by taking people away from 'real work'.

"We're putting the story-telling back into people's presentations" said Majin.

"It doesn't matter whether the presentation is about a company's sales figures, their new IT system, or about how they're trying to reduce carbon emissions."

"We all love cartoons and we all love to hear a story: Vidoons turn presentations into stories."

"Your audience sees something start to appear and they're irresistibly drawn into it. It's a visual journey."

At the moment some 50 per cent of the company's business is coming from the US, with New York-based not-for-profit inspirational speaking organisation TED – which works with people such as Bill Clinton, Al Gore and Bill Gates – among its latest clients.

"I'd say at least 50 per cent of enquires come from the US" said Majin.

"I think it's because the US has a more extrovert culture. They expect higher levels of showmanship and communication in all walks of life and that includes business presentations. Show-and-tell is a big part of their childhood experience."

"We're very comfortable working for global customers. The Government says it wants to make the UK a global-innovation hub, with a specific focus on the digital-creative sector."

"We're happy to be part of that."

"It's great to think of people around the world using Vidoons in their presentations. Anything that makes the world's presentations less tedious and more fun has got to be a good thing."

'End is nigh' for our arcades after Budget changes the game

AMUSEMENT arcades could be forced to close by new regulations introduced in the Budget concerning tax on gaming machines.

Arcade machines will be subjected to Machine Games Duty introduced on gross profits and set at two rates: 20 per cent, and 5 per cent for machines with very low prizes.

The amusements, traditionally called 'one-armed bandits', have long been a feature of the Kent seaside resort – but the industry has been struggling to maintain momentum for years.

Arcade trade association BACTA says it is hugely alarmed at these rates, having repeatedly told the Treasury that rates of anything above 15 per cent and 3 per cent will cripple the industry and cause many closures.

Derek Petrie, president of BACTA, said: "The end for many amusement arcades is nigh. Despite hundreds of small-business-owners warning politicians for 18 months now of the danger that Machine Games Duty would present to our industry, Chancellor George Osborne has failed to listen."

"The rates that the minister has proposed for his new tax on arcades are simply too high and will result in another cruel wave of closures on the seaside."

"It is inconceivable that a Government supposedly committed to small business and to tourism has made this decision – 300 arcades and 1,000 jobs have already gone."

"Now more will follow."

ADVERTISER'S ANNOUNCEMENT

THERE TO HELP YOU:
Mr Simon Hammond

YOUR starter for 10: Name something that any businessman or woman knows is essential, really doesn't like dealing with and often gets shoved to the bottom of the 'must do' pile.

Insurance. Not exactly the sexiest topic to inspire the county's entrepreneurs, who are bombarded with conflicting claims about who provides the best cover for the cheapest price.

You can even go compare at the money supermarket, but you'll end up as mystified as a meerkat. Which is why it pays to use someone like Simon Hammond.

The Hammond Consultancy, based in Ashford, specialises in insurance for business, takes the complexity out of choosing the right policy and manages the process, from helping fill in the initial forms to advising on making a claim.

Simon's assiduous attention to detail – he deals with all clients personally – and his 10-year track record means he has won increasing market share among Kent companies, from sole traders to fast-growing corporates with turnovers from £10,000 to £10 million.

His philosophy is simple: source the most competitive quotes, react quickly to enquiries and check with clients before policy renewal dates to ensure they provide adequate cover.

Personal service with a capital PS.

"Of course, there's always someone who will offer a cheaper deal, but the real issue is providing the right cover and making sure that policies meet the needs of businesses as they grow," says Simon.

However, he is mindful that tough times call for value-for-money and he is justifiably proud of saving a major client £24,000 a year in premiums on a portfolio of policies.

And there's also his ability to respond quickly: he recently provided insurance in less than 24 hours for a celebrity client borrowing £35,000 worth of jewellery for a photoshoot.

Business insurance, it's more important than meerkats...

SOLE TRADERS

SIMON Hammond is passionate about ensuring that start-up businesses have the correct cover.

"I know just how daunting it is, and a supportive consultancy such as ours can be tremendously reassuring," he says.

"While insurance premiums are very inexpensive right now, there's often some arduous form-filling that I can handle on a client's behalf, as well as providing an immediate quote over the phone."

Simon's range of small-business policies include:

- Public liability for a range of businesses, including small builders, electricians and carpenters.
- Property owners' insurance for landlords.
- Professional indemnity to protect self-employed professionals.
- Policies for shops and offices, including public and employers' liability, stock and contents, and interruption of business in the event of a fire.

LARGER COMPANIES

COMPANIES turning over more than £1 million may have more specific insurance requirements, and Simon Hammond makes a point of personally visiting clients to understand their business, the people involved and how they operate.

In addition to the standard policies needed by all larger companies, Simon also provides:

- Fleet policies for company vehicles.
- Goods in transit insurance.
- Private medical insurance schemes.
- Personal insurances for company directors.

TESTIMONIALS

HERE'S what some of Simon Hammond's clients say about The Hammond Consultancy...

"You set the standards for others to follow... it is very refreshing to come across a professional, polite and prompt service. I have no hesitation in recommending your organisation."

M O'Donnell, head of finance and human resources, The Elite group of companies

"The Hammond Consultancy provides us with a comprehensive and thorough evaluation of our insurance needs, then finds us an insurance company who give service and value. Just what we need to get on with our own business."

D Aisher, managing director, Drakes Plumbing Supplies

"The Hammond Consultancy took the time to understand our needs, and then delivered exactly what was required."

P Stratton, financial controller, Neville UK plc

SOCIAL CARE SECTOR

CARE providers need specialist insurance to cover eventualities that can arise when serving the vulnerable, both young and old.

The Hammond Consultancy can tailor your needs to bespoke social care liability, professional indemnity and medical malpractice insurance.

Expert help is needed for:

- Abuse or injury to residents, staff or members of the public
- Allegations against directors or staff, including claims of bullying, sexism, racism or breaches of health and safety legislation.
- Volunteers who often undertake similar tasks to employees.

Training, courses and careers

Students showing off forensic skills

FORENSIC science students from Canterbury College have been using their skills to investigate cars involved in road traffic collisions.

Year 2 BTEC students gathered forensic evidence from a vehicle involved in a serious collision when they visited Copart vehicle salvage yard in Sandwich.

They examined the vehicle to find clues which told the story of how it crashed.

The session helped them learn how traffic accident investigators use scientific investigative techniques to reconstruct the events leading to accidents.

It was the first time forensic science students had been able to put themselves in the shoes of traffic accident investigators.

Tutor Trevor Boddy said: "The visit allowed the students to complete their studies regarding road traffic collision investigation. Without such a visit it would have been difficult for them to get the understanding they need to pass."

Forensic investigation students at Canterbury College work with industry experts and go on various trips to broaden their knowledge.

Recently, students learned about crime scene investigation when Kent Police forensic specialists held a class at the college.

For more on forensic science at the college, go to www.canterburycollege.ac.uk/science.

Bluewater lesson in product display

SHEPPEY students visited John Lewis Blue-water for a masterclass in creating eye-catching product displays.

The department store is supporting students studying for a BTEC first diploma in business, retail and fashion marketing level 2 to apply academic theory to practical situations.

Staff from visual merchandise team, who are responsible for creating displays in the shop, shared their knowledge on how to prepare, plan and install displays, using that season's key fashion and home trends.

Students also had a behind-the-scenes visit to the visual merchandising studio and workshop to see the team at work, followed by a practical session where they made their own designs.

Lecturer Anne Minett said: "Our visit to John Lewis was truly inspirational for the students and proved that 'seeing really is believing'."

"Whilst this is taught in college, students really benefit from hearing this and experiencing service standards expected in the workplace from major employers and especially from a department store with a reputation for the highest standard of customer service."

Apprentices' chance to put best foot forward

YOUNG people across Kent and Medway interested in a career in health and social care are being invited to join Medway Community Healthcare as an apprentice.

Successful applicants will undertake an apprenticeship that will combine studying towards a diploma in business administration, or health and social care, with working at Medway Community Healthcare, which provides a range of NHS community health services for adults and children.

It also supplies specialist, urgent, and out-of-hours services.

Helen Cunningham, human resources and organisational development director, said: "As an apprentice you can get your career off to a great start."

"Not only will you gain valuable experience in a full-time job but also study towards a recognised vocational qualification, a technical certificate, functional skills in English and maths, and complete a range of in-house training programmes – all of which are fully funded."

No experience is necessary to apply for an apprenticeship as all training is offered as part of the scheme.

Since the Medway Community Healthcare apprenticeship scheme began in April, 2010, 10 students have completed apprenticeships.

Of those who have completed their apprenticeship, six now have permanent jobs with Medway Community Healthcare in teams including dental, nutrition and dietetics and human resources.

The remaining apprentices have gained places at university or gone into other areas of employment, including the British Army.

Former apprentice Liz Emery, 21, completed her apprenticeship in April 2011 and now works in the practice development team.

She has been part of the interview panel for new apprenticeships, and said: "The apprenticeship gave me everything I wanted. I was able to earn a wage while studying and developing new skills and the experience I gained helped me to secure a permanent job."

Apprentices can choose to study towards an advanced apprenticeship in health and social care in either respiratory or podiatry (foot) care which will involve working with patients and clinical staff, as well as offering administrative support to the team.

The apprenticeships take 18 months and involve visiting patients at home to provide care, information and advice.

A 12-month administration apprenticeship is also available in the podiatry service. This role will involve a full range of administrative tasks including liaising with patients and staff; organising appointments; dealing with enquiries; and maintaining accurate records.

Apprentices earn £97.50 a week. The closing date for applications is Monday, April 16. To apply visit <https://apprenticeshipvacancymatchingservice.lsc.gov.uk/navms/forms/candidate/Apprenticeships.aspx>.

OPPORTUNITY: Medway Community Healthcare is looking to take on new apprentices

Student chef cooks up a storm to win prestigious French competition

THANET College student Joe Gray, who is studying to be a chef, has won the prestigious Auguste Escoffier Foundation cooking competition.

Joe, 19, from Deal, studies Professional Chef Level 3 at the college. Four colleges from the South East were teamed up with French colleges, and students worked in pairs to cook the same two-course meal in three hours.

Thanet College was teamed with Lycée Francis de Croisset, in Grasse, and Joe worked with student Sonia Gomes on their dish.

He cooked the main meal of sea bass Cleopatra with stuffed courgette flowers and saffron potatoes, while Sonia made the dessert of lemon tuille.

The judges, including top French chefs, praised Joe's classical interpretation of the dish, describing his food as "faultless".

Roger Phillips, programme area manager for catering and hospitality, said: "This is a first-rate competition with the opportunity for French and English students to work together.

"Joe represented the college exceptionally well and had an excellent result. It's an experience he'll never forget."

Chef tutor Steve Kendall mentored Joe, and said: "His classical approach to the dish was the right approach to take."

Joe said he enjoyed competing, and added: "Working under such immense pressure as well as having the language barrier was difficult, but a great experience."

SCHOOL DAYS: The Countess of Wessex helped her old school celebrate its 125th anniversary

Royal old girl gets in on the act

PUPILS and staff at Kent College Pembury welcomed back old girl the Countess of Wessex last week.

The college is celebrating its 125th anniversary year and Sophie officially re-opened the college theatre which has been re-named the Countess of Wessex Theatre following its refurbishment a year after it was damaged in a fire.

The countess, who attended the girls' school in Pembury from 1976-81, said she was delighted to return and commented on the happy years she had at the school.

Sophie had the opportunity to meet and chat with girls in the prep and senior school who proudly cheered and waved windmills to mark occasion.

Pupils treated the countess to an excerpt of the school's theatre production of A Midsummer Night's Dream, before announcing the official re-opening of the Countess of Wessex Theatre.

Students also released 125 balloons to mark the occasion and to celebrate the school's 125th anniversary.

During her visit, Sophie enjoyed an informal lunch with some of her former teachers – who even brought along some of her old school books.

Grammar pupils celebrating after winning places at top universities

EIGHT Maidstone Grammar School students are celebrating after being offered places at three of the world's top seats of learning – University of Oxford, University of Cambridge, and Harvard University in America.

They will all start their degree courses in September.

Deputy headmaster Paul Smith said he was absolutely delighted the students' talents had been recognised by such prestigious universities.

He said: "Rob Ledniczky is the first student in the school's 460 year history to win a place at Harvard and the number of offers students have received from Oxford and Cambridge is the best we have achieved for over 10 years."

The successful students are: Alec Cunningham (University of Cambridge – law); Robert Ledniczky (Harvard University – liberal arts); Thomas Kingston (University of Cambridge – mathematics); Joshua Mustill (University of Cambridge – economics); Toby Abbott (University of Oxford – history and politics); Philip Burgess (University of Cambridge – economics); Emily Chadwick (University of Cambridge – modern and medieval languages); Alexander Brown (University of Cambridge – natural sciences).

YOUR NEXT MOVE

DON'T GIVE UP! 'Today's businesses face a plethora of red tape and bureaucracy, exacerbated by the increasingly litigious society within which we live and trade,' says Roger House, right, who says the FSB offers invaluable support to its members in the endless struggle with officialdom

FEDERATION OF SMALL BUSINESSES

Join us and reap the benefits in the battle against red tape

IT is the goal of the Federation of Small Businesses to continually deliver unbeatable value for its membership.

The members have significant benefits available to them and the right of membership benefits provide protection and commercial advantage in line with the needs of most businesses.

There are also additional membership facilities available for FSB members delivered by our service-providers.

The FSB Legal Protection Scheme is the cornerstone of membership. Today's businesses face a plethora of red tape and bureaucracy, exacerbated by the increasingly litigious society within which we live and trade.

The exposure is forever growing. Reliable and practical support is difficult to find and expensive to maintain.

As a right of membership, every business will benefit from:

- 24/7 legal advice from qualified lawyers.
- Staffed by solicitors and barristers, the FSB legal advice line is provided as a right of membership and the only additional cost is the telephone call, which is charged at local network rates.

- Legal insurance protection. The insurance protection covers full, joint and retired and associate members for a wide range of business-related activities. The insurance protection includes legal fees and statutory awards in specified disputes, including employment and tax. There is a limit of £50,000 for any one claim; however, the protection is available for more than one claim up to a maximum of £1 million in any one year. The insurance is subject to terms and conditions.

- Legal information online. Members are able to access information and documentation on employment and commercial law, tax and health and safety available through the FSB website when logged in as a member.

With thousands of members using the site every month, it is clear that the provision of easy-to-access online legal and tax information is a valuable member benefit.

CXK

Summer can be the best yet for young

YOUNG people in Kent and Medway are being given the opportunity to spend a summer full of adventure and excitement, learning new skills, making new friends and even improving their CV with an exciting array of activities.

CXK (formerly Connexions Kent & Medway) is delivering National Citizen Service, which offers young people aged 15 and 16 the chance to take on adventurous challenges and put something back into the community through a social-action project.

Working in partnership with the National Youth Agency and O2 Think Big, CXK has been awarded 736 places, which are now up for grabs for 2012 Year 11 leavers who either live in or attend school in Kent.

For 17 days between June and August, young people will get to take part in a range of events, including a fun-packed five-day residential experience away from home featuring outdoor activities, inspirational speakers and a social-action festival celebrating the positive contribution young people can make to society.

On their return home, they'll be making a real impact in the community by organising their own social-action project, supported by O2 Think Big. And when it all ends, they'll get the chance to meet prospective employers and colleges, finding out about training and volunteering opportunities.

What's more, NCS graduates will be invited to an event at The O2 in London to celebrate their achievements with a night of music and dance.

Lauren Anning, head of delivery support, said: "This is a fantastic opportunity for young people to take part in an exciting new adventure as well as learn new skills."

For the whole experience, including the residential accommodation, food, transport and certificate for programme completion, not forgetting the celebration party, the organisers just ask for a £50 voluntary contribution, with bursaries available on request.

■ For more information, phone CXK on 01622 683155 or email info@cxk.org. You can also complete an application form at www.connexionskentandmedway.co.uk.

CNCA

Help agency continues to set a high standard

CNCA is Kent's most respected independent nursing and care agency and the leading provider of training for professional care in the community.

Since 1993, CNCA has been providing qualified carers, support workers, residential social-workers, care assistants and companions to the NHS, Social Services, private hospitals and trusts, nursing homes, residential homes, day-care centres and housing associations across Kent.

A key contribution of the agency is its support of adults with learning difficulties, in homes and in the community, so that they can lead as independent lives as possible.

It has established a reputation for responding quickly, providing the highest standards in professional care and exceeding expectation in client satisfaction.

CNCA has rigorous training-induction procedures for its own staff and has established a training and assessment centre to provide in-house NVQ supervision and assessment for all major care disciplines.

Every day it looks to see where it can improve, accepting and understanding its responsibilities. It will act without hesitation to do all that is required and more.

Sometimes people face 'extraordinary' problems, some expected, others unique situations that occur out of the blue. What is meant by 'extraordinary' is a problem faced outside the realm of 'ordinary' lives.

For instance, a loved one might be enduring some form of physical disability, or a family member experiencing the after-effects of an operation; a child might be born with severe learning difficulties or autism; or, indeed, a parent could have grown too old to safely fend for themselves.

Each situation has its difficulties and comes wrapped in unique circumstances, not only for the family, but more importantly for the person who requires support.

If you are facing an extraordinary situation, the question is 'Where do I turn for help?'. The first port of call is usually, and appropriately, Social Services, who will try to help find a solution.

Unfortunately, many changes are taking place in the care sector and more emphasis is placed on the individual to arrange their own carers. Herein lies the difficulty and possibly another dilemma for the family. CNCA has been helping people in Kent for more than 13 years, supporting families and their loved ones at home with qualified carers and support workers.

All staff undertake rigorous police and other statutory checks, a full induction process that examines both their qualifications and references and have regular training.

Once a comprehensive needs assessment is carried out, the appropriate care is delivered and maintained.

CNCA operates a 24-hour service, 365 days a year, manned by care co-ordinators who have detailed knowledge of each individual's needs.

KENT INVICTA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Excellent businesses rewarded

KENT businesses joined together this week at the prestigious Canterbury Cathedral Lodge to celebrate commercial brilliance.

The Kent Invicta Chamber's Excellence In Business Awards evening turned out to be a special evening for not only the winners but for all those who attended, with an entertaining show of tricks and illusion from entertainment group Magic On The Menu.

Now in their seventh year, the awards have been a great catalyst to promote the excellence in business that is so abundant in the county.

The awards were in split into five categories, and with a record number of entries for each award it was extremely difficult to select just three finalists for each.

Business Of The Year was RIFT Ltd; winner of the Excellence In Customer Service award was Canterbury Cathedral Lodge; and top of the Achievement In International Business category was Quorum Technologies Ltd.

The Most Promising New Business award went to Think3e and the Entrepreneur Of The Year title went to Lynn Janes, of Quay Assessment Community Interest Company.

All the winners and finalists will now go forward to the British Chambers of Commerce (BCC) National Awards, and Kent Invicta is confident of continuing its success in this competition.

For the past two years the South East Business Of The Year has come from Kent, with the chamber's 2011 Most Promising New Business, Recruitment Genius, going on to win the BCC national award.

Summing up at the end of the event, Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce chief executive Jo James said: "I hope everybody enjoyed themselves – I certainly did."

"Not only with reference to the entertainment, but also with regard to the excellence in business represented by the award-winners and finalists – and indeed all the entrants for the awards."

"The quality and quantity of applications received year each just go to show what an entrepreneurial county we work in."

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL
(VARIOUS ROADS, THANET)
(SPEED LIMITS) ORDER 2012*ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers has made an Order under Sections 1(1), 2(1) and 2(2), Sections 81 to 84, of and part IV of Schedule 9 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 as amended, the effect of which has introduced reduced speed limits to be enforced on the approaches to the "Lord of the Manor" roundabouts, the circulatory carriageways and the link road between them, to 40 mph.

The length of the existing 40 mph speed limit on the A299 Canterbury Road East has been extended in a westerly direction from its current boundary adjacent to its junction with Windermere Avenue, to its southern roundabout junction with "Lord of the Manor"; and the length of the existing 40 mph speed limit on Sandwich Road has been extended in a north easterly direction from a point 23 metres north east of the mid point of its junction with Cliffs End Road to the southern roundabout at the junction commonly known as "Lord of the Manor".

Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd has been commissioned to work in partnership with the Kent County Council to progress the legal procedures necessary to implement the proposed measures.

A copy of the Order which shall come into operation on Monday 2nd April 2012, an explanatory statement and a plan showing the extents of the scheme can be inspected during normal office hours at the Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ, Thanet District Council Offices, PO Box 9, Cecil Street, Margate, Kent, CT9 1XZ, and affected Parish and Town Councils which are: Cliffsend PC, Manston PC and Ramsgate TC.

Anyone may, by application to the High Court within 6 weeks of the date of publication of this Notice, challenge the validity of the Orders or of any provision contained in them on the grounds that it is not within the powers conferred by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, or of any instrument made there under, or that there has been a failure to comply with any statutory requirement in relation to the Order.

WATER INDUSTRY ACT 1991

SOUTH EAST WATER LIMITED
REVISED TEMPORARY BAN ON WATER USE

South East Water gives notice that, pursuant to sections 76 and 76A-C of the Water Industry Act 1991, it prohibits from the beginning of 5 April 2012, throughout its entire area of supply (extending across parts of Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Hampshire and Berkshire), the following uses of potable water supplied by it (that is water treated to drinkable standards):

(a)	Watering a garden using a hosepipe
(b)	Cleaning a private motor-vehicle (or a trailer for such a vehicle) using a hosepipe
(c)	Watering plants on domestic or other non-commercial premises using a hosepipe
(d)	Cleaning a private leisure boat using a hosepipe
(e)	Filling or maintaining a domestic swimming or paddling pool
(f)	Drawing water, using a hosepipe, for domestic recreational use
(g)	Filling or maintaining a domestic pond (manmade or natural) using a hosepipe
(h)	Filling or maintaining an ornamental fountain (including a cascade or any other display of moving water, and includes filling by permanent plumbing)
(i)	Cleaning walls, or windows, of domestic premises using a hosepipe
(j)	Cleaning paths or patios using a hosepipe
(k)	Cleaning other artificial outdoor surfaces using a hosepipe

The following will be exempted from the restriction:

- i) using a hosepipe in a garden or for cleaning walls or windows of domestic premises, paths or patios, a private leisure boat or an artificial outdoor surface, where such use is necessary for health and safety reasons;
 - ii) watering a garden attached to a domestic dwelling or watering plants on domestic premises using a hosepipe, by people with severe mobility problems who hold a current Blue Badge as issued by their local authority;
 - iii) using a hosepipe to clean a private motor vehicle, private leisure boat or walls and windows of domestic premises, where this is done as a service to customers in the course of a business;
 - iv) using a hosepipe to water an area of grass or outdoor artificial surfaces used for sport or recreation, where this is required in connection with a national or international sports event;
 - v) drip or trickle irrigation watering systems, fitted with a pressure reducing valve and a timer, that are not handheld, that place water drip by drip directly onto the soil surface or beneath the soil surface, without any surface run off or dispersion of water through the air using a jet or mist;
 - vi) maintaining a domestic swimming pool with a water conservation recycling system;
- Customers should note that a number of concessions earlier proposed have been withdrawn.

For the meaning of certain terms used in this notice and specific exceptions from the prohibitions, see the Water Use (Temporary Bans) Order 2010. Amongst other things, that Order defines:

- (a) using a hosepipe to include both drawing water supplied by South East Water at the time of the prohibition through a hosepipe from a container and also filling or partly filling a container with such water by means of a hosepipe;
- (b) garden to include a park, gardens open to the public, a lawn, a grass verge, an area of grass used for sport or recreation, an allotment garden as defined in section 22(1) of the Allotments Act 1922, any area of allotment used for non-commercial purposes and any other green space; and
- (c) health and safety to include removing or minimising any risk to human or animal health or safety and preventing or controlling the spread of causative agents or disease.

The topping up of an established domestic pond is also permitted if the welfare of fish in the pond is at risk.

For the purposes of the prohibitions relating to the use of a hosepipe, the prohibitions apply whether or not any device such as a sprinkler is attached to the hosepipe.

Any person who contravenes any of these prohibitions is guilty of an offence, and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £1,000.

Representations concerning any of these prohibitions may be made in writing by 4 April 2012 to Lee Dance at South East Water, Rocfort Road, Snodland, Kent ME6 5AH. If, as a result of such representations, South East Water decides to vary any terms of the prohibition, a further notice will be published. Subject to this, the prohibitions will have effect from the beginning of 5 April 2012 and will remain in force until further notice.

Further details concerning the prohibitions and actions concerning the current drought may be found on South East Water's website at www.southeastwater.co.uk

(PROHIBITION OF TRAFFIC) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012
ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984, SECTION 14(1)
AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Kent County Council has temporarily closed Public Footpath AE644 between Bilsington Bridge and Bonnington Bridge from the 23rd March 2012.

The path will be closed for a maximum of six months, although it is expected that it will reopen before 23rd April 2012.

The path is to be closed because works are planned on or near it to repair a collapsed culvert and there is a likelihood of danger to path users.

The alternative route is to head north from Bilsington Bridge and turn right onto the B2067, continue for approximately 1.0 kilometre to the Bonnington Road junction, turn right down Bonnington Road to Bonnington Bridge

THE INTERVIEW

Gino D'Acampo

Italian who's loving the heat

Joe Bill talks to celebrity chef Gino D'Acampo ahead of his visit to the BBC's Good Food Show

THE cream of the UK's culinary elite heads to Kent during the next fortnight for a festival of cooking. Glow, the new entertainment venue at Bluewater shopping centre, is hosting this spring's BBC Good Food Show UK, the first time it has been in the county.

Among those present will be Saturday Kitchen's James Martin, wine expert Olly Smith and celebrity chef Gino D'Acampo.

The former king of the 'I'm A Celeb' jungle will be signing his new book for fans as well as providing an insight into his cooking skills.

"The people will be able to sample some of the dishes and the wines – they can see cooking demonstrations, so they can get a lot of tips out of it," said D'Acampo.

"It is a chance for them to meet their favourite cook on television. It's also a good chance for us, too, because it is always a pleasure to see them."

The Italian, known for his passion for the food of his home nation, has been highly sought after since winning the ITV reality show in 2009 and since become a household name across the UK.

He said: "I am very busy at the moment. I have just finished a new project in schools with a company called Innovate Services. Together we have designed 12 pasta dishes which will go into about 120 different schools around the country. They can get a bit of authentic Italian flavour in school, but also it is nice and healthy."

D'Acampo, 35, has also entered the world of the smartphone, having launched his own app this year.

He said: "It's called Eating Italian – we have about 25 to 30 video recipes done exclusively for the app. There are pictures to make the meals and it is also a way to learn a bit of the Italian language. There are all the words like spelling linguini properly, or tagliatelle and things like that. It is very helpful, it is not too expensive, it is beautifully shot, so it is all good."

Like many other celebrity chefs, D'Acampo has his own range of cookware and a number of cookbooks, including his latest offering, Italian Home Baking, which he will be signing at Bluewater.

He said: "The book is all to do with stuff you have to bake, from breads to biscuits to Italian pastas to Italian pizzas... everything you need."

"But my favourite dish would be anything to do with pasta – a bit of pasta with cherry tomatoes, a bit of basil and some extra virgin olive oil... to me that is simple food at its best."

The best pasta for me is the very thin penne, the tube with pieces of mozzarella, nice and simple."

D'Acampo grew up in Naples and inherited his love of food from his grandfather Giovanni, himself a head chef.

The young protégé attended the Luigi de Medici Catering College before setting off to find work elsewhere. He said: "I was ready for an adventure, so I travelled all over Europe, employed in different kitchens, learning about life and love. I ended up working for the Italian Stallion himself as head chef at Sylvester Stallone's Mambo King restaurant in Marbella.

"While I was in Spain, I met and fell in love with my beautiful English wife and moved with her to London in 1995."

And it is his travels that continue to help the chef come up with new ideas for the kitchen.

He said: "It happens that when you travel, or when you go to someone's house for dinner, or even to other restaurants, I always carry a small notepad with me."

"So if I try something new I think 'OK, I like this idea' and go back home or to my development kitchen at the office and I see if I can do something new with it – this is how it happens."

"You try it on the family first and then a couple of friends and then you see if the flavours work together – then you put it into the book."

"Sometimes someone gives you a recipe and says 'Gino, I tried this one and I think it's fantastic'. So you try it and tweak it a little and then you have got it. It is a very simple process."

Since the jungle, where he starred alongside Katie Price and Samantha Fox, D'Acampo's reputation has rocketed, although he is quick to play down his increased fame.

"Honestly, I had a lot of work before I went in the jungle, but of course it was great," he said. "I already had my books, my pots and pans in supermarkets, and all my ideas were there. It did help because it was in front of an evening audience who were not really familiar with me."

"We get stopped when we are out shopping, especially in the food-shopping environment. They see a chef, they take advantage of coming over and asking questions and food questions. And you know what – it is great!"

However, don't expect to see the chef on skates or in reality sequins any time soon: "I think I am done with the reality shows. No dancing on ice and all that – it would require too much training."

However, there is one conquest D'Acampo would like to make outside the food industry: he wants to write a hit record.

The big Oasis fan said: "Yes I do. No laughing – that is not fair! I play the guitar and have played it since I was nine or 10. I used to go to boy scouts and learned how to play the guitar. Everybody who plays an instrument comes to try out a little singing. And, like I do with recipes, I have something written down, which I change every two or three months."

"One day it might happen. I really hope so because very rarely it happens to me that I look back and wish I had done that. I have been lucky to do most of the things I have wanted to do. So I hope it will happen."

■ Gino D'Acampo will be appearing at the BBC Good Food Show UK, being held at Glow, Bluewater, from Thursday to Sunday, April 12-15. See www.bluewater.co.uk/whatsonlist for more details.

EASTER

The perfect time to enjoy spring beauty

WINTER is well and truly over and now's the perfect time to get out and about to explore Kent's beautiful coast and countryside.

Whether it's the joys of the open fields and the downs, or the sandy beaches and cliffs, now is the ideal time of year to stretch your legs and enjoy the sunshine.

Strolling through sun-dappled, bluebell-carpeted woods is one of spring's most magical experiences, and these seasonal flowers are a feature of the county.

Bluebells flower in April and May, although this year's late cold spell may delay them. The National Trust publishes details on its website of where to find the best bluebell walks in its properties – but there are also many sites in natural woodland that provide a feast for the senses.

Walking is the perfect weekend activity for spring... when it's not too hot for a brisk stroll but also not too cold to sit outside in a beer garden.

The AA publishes two popular books to guide you – 50 walks to country pubs and the hardback 365-pub walks and cycle rides – but it's as much fun to head off down a track you love, or to roam into parts you have never approached before.

How about taking in one of the county's highly-commended vineyards? Most home-grown vintages come from the area around The Weald, but there also some near Folkestone and Canterbury. Many offer tastings and tours.

Many of the county's stately homes and attractions are opening in time for the Easter break, and with crowds fewer in number than for the rest of the holiday period it's the perfect time to take it all in at your leisure.

Lambing is synonymous with springtime and many farms will be offering the chance for visitors to see the newcomers to their flock.

And don't forget the origins of the holiday. Many churches have impressive displays, with bouquets as well as re-creations of the scene of the passion of Christ.

When Easter comes, you know summer is just round the corner, too.

ON the Saturday eve of the London Olympics, Quex Park's Sound Island Festival will be paying homage to the best of British with a list right out of the Britpop era. Best known for their singles of the 90s, Sit Down and She's A Star, James have topped charts around the world. Joining them will be Echo & The Bunnymen, whose chart-topping successes include The Killing Moon and Nothing Lasts Forever. Multi-platinum sellers Cast, whose live performances have been described by Noel Gallagher as a "religious experience", will also join the list of 90s legends. Crowds will be treated to performances from, Inspiral Carpets and indie-rockers Space. Sunday's line-up includes Olly Murs and Rizzle Kicks. Festival tickets are on sale now.

PRIMATE-KEEPERS at Howletts have announced another birth among an endangered species. Asamara, the grizzled leaf monkey, is the 20th successful birth in the troop at the Bekesbourne park, which is the only group of this species in human care outside its native Java. Keeper Matt Ford said: "Mum and baby are doing very well. The birth provides hope for the survival of these endangered primates in captivity. Deforestation has resulted in habitat loss for the grizzled leaf monkey – only 4 per cent of its original forest habitat remains on Java." There are several recent new-borns at the park – go online to find out more.

Images of Ellen Terry A rare opportunity

Smallhythe Place, Tenterden

Wednesday, April 11

01580 762334

www.nationaltrust.org

SMALLHYTHE Place, the small house with the big charm, has a rare treat in store for visitors. Staff will be revealing rarely-seen personal possessions from the Victorian actress Ellen Terry's collection of books, photographs and letters. Terry was a renowned actress in the late 1800s and early 1900s and lived at Smallhythe Place from 1899 to 1928.

The attraction is owned by the National Trust, which will bring Ellen's story alive through short talks on the items.

Paul Meredith, house manager, said: "We also hope to include examples of her children's works, such as her daughter Edy's sketchbook of costume designs."

Active Easter Egg action and spring walks

Penshurst Place, Tonbridge

Sat, March 31-Thu, April 15

01892 870307

www.penshurstplace.com

FAMILIES can look forward to an eggciting holiday as Penshurst Place hosts children's Easter activities and events.

Young visitors can get creative by trying their hand at craft activities from midday to 4pm as well as a daily spring walk. Come and see Aardvark Productions take its audience on a celebration of the season. The show sees the old man of the woods and his companion as they regale you with tales of Easter and the celebrations of this wonderful season.

Youngsters can also try their hands at egg-rolling, while there will also be a traditional egg-and-spoon race. All the children's events are included in the normal garden ticket admission.

Wartime ways 1940s-style celebration

CAPTURE the atmosphere of the 1940s at the Kent & East Sussex Railway in Tenterden in May when its annual wartime weekend gets into full swing.

Visitors of all ages can come along to experience the Forties lifestyle as the stations along the line turn back the clock with authentic memorabilia, bunting, wartime demonstrations and spivs. There will be flying displays, dancing, singing and a packed programme of entertainment. The old-style trains will run throughout the weekend and each 1940s ticket includes unlimited steam-train travel between Tenterden and Bodiam station all day. History enthusiasts can browse a range of civilian and military vehicles, privately owned and fully restored to their wartime glory.

THE Ashford Classic Motorcycle Show has become a regular highlight of the Easter weekend – and this year is no different. Held at Orbital Park's modern agricultural market, the event attracts a range of classic motorcycles, including rarely-seen American machines. The show bikes are judged during the course of the day, with a ceremony and prize raffle at about 3pm. The Ashford show also incorporates a bike-only autojumble, with garage-clearance stalls available for anyone who'd like to declutter the shed and turn old relics from old wrecks into a little extra cash. These stalls are available for £10 pre-booked. Admission is £5 for adults.

Take Hart or even The Hog... high street has a new gem

WHEN you've struggled to get a table at a pub restaurant for weeks on end, you start to wonder what all the fuss is about. A two-for-one deal maybe? Or is it simply that the food is exceptional?

In this case, it's most definitely the latter and, combined with a friendly team who go out of their way to make sure guests are happy, the recently-relaunched White Hart Hotel in Hythe has become the gem of the high street.

This historic inn – built in 1395 – is a family-run hotel, restaurant and freehouse, boasting original features and a stunning 16th-century courtyard.

Low oak beams and an inglenook fireplace make for a cosy feel and while the pictures of celebrities who have enjoyed the chef's cooking could be viewed as slightly cheesy, they actually did have the desired effect and I found myself quietly impressed that the likes of Johnny Depp and Britney Spears admired the person who was about to cook my food.

After ordering a bottle of Sauvignon Blanc (£12.50) we looked at the menu, which consisted of a range of locally-sourced produce, a selection of delicious specials and the type of good, honest dishes that promise bags of flavour and the likelihood of leaving you stuffed.

I chose the green-pea-and-goat's-cheese risotto (£6) and my dining companion the soup of the day – roasted red pepper (£4.50).

My guest's soup packed real punch and left that warm feeling of true home-cooked food. My risotto was delicious, although slightly on the large side and I was already worrying about how I was going to manage the next course.

For our main dishes my companion chose the tasty Cajun-style rump steak with hand-cut wedges (£14) and I went for pizza.

While I don't usually choose pizza when I eat out, I defy anyone who sees The Hog (£9) on the menu and doesn't consider it.

The stone-baked pizza boasts crispy pork belly, black pudding, smoked ham hock, mozzarella, herbs and rocket (£9). I won't lie: I could barely contain myself with excitement.

So it was with great sadness that after four slices of the delicious pizza I had to wave the white flag, slightly annoyed at myself for naively wolfing down every bite of my starter without thinking about what was coming next.

This is when I have to again praise the staff, who, having already impressed me with their friendly attitude, wrapped the pizza in foil so I could take it home to eat later.

Despite being stuffed, the dessert menu looked too tempting to ignore and so we shared a lemon-and-lime posset with raspberry coolie (£4.75). This was the perfect dessert: tasty, fresh and presented beautifully.

The White Hart is a must, whether for a full sit-down meal or a drink in the stunning courtyard and bar.

Our bill came to £50.75, well worth it for food I can only describe as simply outstanding.

Jamie Oliver is part of the Bluewater Union

JAMIE Oliver is to open a new restaurant at Bluewater shopping centre, near Dartford.

Together with business partner Chris Bianco, the celebrity chef will launch a Union Jacks restaurant on the lower Thames Walk entrance of the recently-opened Plaza. It will be Oliver's second eatery at the shopping centre after Jamie's Italian opened there last year.

Union Jacks was created by Oliver and Phoenix-based Chris Bianco, who is renowned for his wood-fired pizzas. It combines Bianco's expertise with Oliver's love of top-quality ingredients.

Oliver's restaurants chief, Simon Blagden, said: "We have received fantastic feedback from our first Union Jacks and are excited to be opening at Bluewater."

"It has proved to be a brilliant site for Jamie's Italian since we launched last autumn, so we are delighted that it will become home to Union Jacks."

The restaurant, billed as "where wood-fired flatbreads meet great British flavours", will become the fourth Union Jacks in the UK and is set over 4,000 sq ft.

From Detroit to Dartford Motown fest

The Orchard, Dartford
Monday to Saturday, April 2-7 01322 220000
www.orchardtheatre.co.uk

EXPERIENCE the energy, excitement, emotion and electricity as the cast of Dancing In The Streets performs at The Orchard. After spending three years in the West End, the show heads around the UK, displaying some of the greatest songs and artists in Motown history. This celebration of classic music comes straight from the heart of Detroit and has been directed by Ivor Novello Award-winner Keith Strachan. Songs will include Heard It Through The Grapevine; My Girl; Dancing In The Streets; I'll Be There; Signed, Sealed, Delivered; I'm Yours; and Stop In The Name Of Love. Music from the likes of The Four Tops, Stevie Wonder, The Temptations, The Supremes and Marvin Gaye will be featured. Tickets priced from £21.50.

Reality of the ironic comic Rich Hall

The Central Theatre, Chatham
Friday, 27 April, at 7.30pm
01634 338338
www.medwayticketslive.co.uk

HEAVYWEIGHT comic from across the pond Rich Hall is popping into Medway as part of his new UK tour. The Central Theatre in Chatham will host the American, who is famous for his grouchy and deadpan style of humour. Hall is a well known stand-up over here after years of TV panel-show appearances including Mock The Week, Never Mind The Buzzcocks and Eight Out Of Ten Cats. Described as the master of absurd irony and king of rapid-fire wit, Hall will discuss a variety of topics in his own hilarious and unique style, but be warned... he tells it just how it is. Tickets are still available and are priced from £16.

Satire in the city Yes, Prime Minister

The Marlowe Theatre, Canterbury
Tuesday to Saturday, April 10-14
01227 787787
www.marlowetheatre.com

THE West End's top comedy hit Yes, Prime Minister is heading to The Marlowe Theatre. Antony Jay and Jonathan Lynn, the original writers of the classic TV series Yes, Minister and Yes, Prime Minister, have taken the stage version nationwide after receiving huge acclaim. The production opened at Chichester Festival Theatre before transferring to The Gielgud Theatre in the West End for an extended and popular run. Now heading around the UK, Graham Seed (he of The Archers) will play the Prime Minister and V For Vendetta star Michael Simkins is Cabinet Secretary Sir Humphrey Appleby. Tickets are priced from £11 to £29.

Airport battle Artists against the nightmare

Nucleus Art Gallery, Chatham high street
Sat, March 31-Thu, April 5
www.nucleus-arts.com

AN art exhibition in Chatham high street is designed to show the potentially horrific impact that a giant hub airport in the Thames estuary would have on Kent.

A series of stunning images will be on show at Nucleus Art Gallery highlighting the devastating impact that the project would have on Medway and the wider countryside. Nine artists, including Martin Booth, Karl Farrer and Tina Lawlor Mottram, have put together the exhibition, called Beauty Or The Beast. The exhibitors call themselves the No Thames Airport Artists Group and aim to "cut through the spin and visualise the case against such a development". Phone 01634 812108 for more information on the exhibition.

National recognition for family team

A TUNBRIDGE Wells property-lettings business has been recognised in the national Belvoir High Achievers awards, which is open to more than 140 of the company's offices throughout the UK.

Father-and-daughter team John and Sadie Haynes, who run the Belvoir office at 72 Camden Road, were presented with the Belvoir Acquisition Award 2012 at a special ceremony.

The award is in recognition of the business's highly-successful acquisition of another local lettings agency, which had traded for 10 years and built up a substantial portfolio of both managed and let-only properties.

The deal meant that the size of their business tripled overnight and three members of the former agency's staff transferred into the Belvoir business.

Belvoir chief executive officer Dorian Gonsalves said:

"After possibly one of the busiest years on record for John and Sadie, this award recognises all the successful hard work they put in to acquiring a competitor and greatly increasing market share in their area."

Joining Dorian at the presentation ceremony was TV presenter Gyles Brandreth, who presented the pair with their winner's plaque, alongside Belvoir chairman Mike Goddard.

New homes could be the ideal rental opportunity

WITH rental values strengthening over the past six months and property prices remaining low, investors could get an even better yield on new properties in Maidstone, according to one local letting agent.

Diane Broomham, sales manager at Maidstone-based Sandersons Residential, says investors can achieve yields of between 5 and 6 per cent based on current values at Redrow's Sutton Woods development, which she says is up by as much as 2 per cent compared with six months ago.

The two-, three- and four-bedroom homes at Sutton Woods, off Sutton Road, are all built to Redrow's specification.

As new-build homes, they are well equipped and easy to maintain, and so will appeal to professionals looking to rent.

Ms Broomham said: "There are some fantastic competitive rates now being offered for buy-to-let mortgages, which gives investors the opportunity to consider property as a much better return on their capital compared with some other investment options."

"With more affordable house prices, rising rents and stocks and shares falling below their worth, bricks and mortar are a more solid investment."

"The two-, three- and four-bedroom homes at Sutton Woods have great rental potential. They are brand new and therefore very appealing to tenants as they provide a clean blank canvas as well as contemporary kitchens and bathrooms."

"Rental demand from professionals in the area is strong and the properties are commutable to London thanks to the close proximity to Maidstone West station, which is 47 minutes from the centre of the capital."

Sandersons Residential estimates that a two-bedroom home priced at £158,950 can achieve a rental income of £700-£775 per month; a three-bedroom house priced from £178,950 an average of £850-£950 per month; and a four-bedroom townhouse priced at £249,950 an average of £1,100-£1,200 per month.

At Sutton Woods, Redrow's contemporary exteriors have spacious interiors and flexible layouts and many of the properties include carpets and flooring throughout and are open for potential purchasers to view.

The homes also offer the potential for further cost-saving on fuel bills, being built to comply with Level 3 of the Government's Code For Sustainable Homes. This means that tenants will benefit from the energy-saving properties of solar-power renewable-energy systems, low-use water-management systems, low-energy-use light fittings and waste-segregation bins to encourage recycling.

Redrow's homes also come with the NHBC 10-year Buildmark warranty and two-year guarantees on all appliances.

Built on the site of the former Senacre College, off Sutton Road, Sutton Woods is a stylish venture incorporating areas of open space while being just a short walk from Mote Park and conveniently close to the town centre.

BMW's ugly duckling is hiding real beauty on the inside

carsforkent.co.uk

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

BRITAIN'S roads changed dramatically when the original Mini heralded the Swinging Sixties.

Aside from the standard car, and plush booted versions, there were estate, minivan and stripped-down Moke jeep variants, too.

The former British Motor Corporation is said to have made a loss on this badge engineering though, but expect VW to do all right with its clever new city car and forthcoming Seat and Skoda spin-offs.

Called the Up! – and that's the last time I shall use the marketer's label by the way, it's plain Up from now on – it can't be a mould breaker like the Mini since similar baby hatchbacks are already on the market.

But none really manages to blend practicality, economy, style, cheekiness and driving fun quite so well.

You can realistically drive this city car from city to city too thanks to excellent aerodynamics and a long wheelbase delivering good refinement for such a small vehicle.

And while it's affordable (from £7,995) it's got a VW badge – a bit of premium appeal.

VW says the Up is its first venture into this sector, conveniently forgetting the sawn-off Polo it once sold as the Lupo, but maybe choosing not to compare its cramped cabin with the capacious one in the 3.54m-long Up.

It can carry four adults and give them ample head, leg and elbow room, plus a decent boot.

Buyers might say: "Who needs a second car?" though some might wait for the five-door version due later this year, although access to the three-door's rear seats is not hard.

For now, all models use an all-new low emission 999cc three-cylinder petrol engine. It is surprisingly smooth for that format, while capable of averaging more than 60mpg and rendering a diesel option pretty pointless – don't rule it out though, and VW has promised an all-electric Up for 2013.

But the petrol would do most people fine, whether in 60PS (59bhp) or 75PS (74bhp) format. Neither is a hot rod, but you wouldn't expect it, and VW expects most people to save cash and go for the 60PS.

An eco BlueMotion version of this is available at a premium of £360, which you may recoup in fuel savings and by escaping road tax, although the whole range is exempt in year one anyway.

Take Up is the entry spec, but mid-range Move Up (from £8,970) brings air con, electric front windows, remote central locking, easy entry sliding seats, a false floor for the deep boot and much more.

And if you want to tart up then there's High Up (from £10,390) bringing alloys, some leather and lots of electrics, with the limited edition black and white versions (£11,180) looking suspiciously like VW tilting at the lucrative Fiat 500 and Mini customisation target market.

Is VW moving on Up to the new Mini with this little incarnation?

IT'S SMALL WONDER: VW new baby hatchback called the Up! surprisingly offers a large amount for a car of this size and is sure to have a serious impact its tiny rivals

DON'T LIKE

... the name Up!. As with Smart's insistence that the brand should be written all lower case, this is a silly idea, too.

NOT SURE

... the £11,180 top models looks good value at 30 per cent more than an entry car – but it cuts a dash, though, especially in black.

REALLY LIKE

... how VW has created a practical budget car that still upholds its slightly premium badge and is nice to drive, too.

BMW's ugly duckling reveals beauty when you get inside

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT'S not as if BMW wasn't told last time, so why does its most affordable and perhaps endearing model still look like it fell out of the ugly tree?

The first generation 1-Series hatchback was an exercise in how not to design a car; it just looked plain awkward, with a saggy, baggy sill line literally being the low point of the execution.

Despite the availability of a five-door version, it wasn't particularly practical either.

Fortunately, its saving graces were typically excellent BMW driving characteristics – being the only rear-wheel drive car in the family hatchback sector – good engines, tax friendliness for company car drivers, and a reputation for being tough and reliable.

And BMW has worked hard on those virtues for the second generation car launched last year, but has again been lazy on the design front.

The new Mark II five-door – three-door sales are met for now by the old model – apes the profile of its predecessor and though it's lost the baggy side-on view, the bluff front end does it no favours.

Get inside this ugly duckling though (priced from £19,375) and the swan emerges.

On the practical side, there's a bigger boot and more space in a cabin that also feels solidly made with quality materials and trim, and alloy highlights.

It's easier to get in and out of the back too; you didn't need to be overweight to catch your backside on the wheel arch as you climbed into the original car.

Mind you, legroom is still a bit cramped compared with some front-wheel drive rivals.

The dashboard layout is logical with lots of spaces and cubbyholes plus the now obligatory aux/USB connections for MP3 players and other gadgets, and you feel that BMW has really thought through what appeals to executives

MAKING ITS MARK:

The BMW 1-Series still lacks the stunning lines of other models from the German car-maker, but the second generation still offers a fantastic drive, with one of the best interiors to found in the sector or private buyers who have to work long hours out of their car.

With the full array of BMW's eco-friendly EfficientDynamics package – stop-start, battery regeneration through braking, low rolling resistance tyres, etc – on board plus powerful yet energy-efficient petrol and diesel engines, the car will also help their company car tax bills or private budgets.

Considering the prices for the premium and technical product you get, it is quite miraculous too that BMW still makes the car in Germany, despite the savings it could make from producing its smallest model somewhere with lower labour costs.

But the big issue, as ever with BMW, is how does the car drive? Beautifully.

The new 1-Series is wider and feels better planted and sprung than the old car, while retaining the lovely balance of the front engine, long wheelbase and rear-driven wheels.

It's easy to then forget the debatable looks and just enjoy the drive. The test car was a 116i petrol in trendy Sport trim (£21,305).

This is an all-new engine with a six-speed manual gearbox as standard that allows the car to be nimble, sporty and thrifty, averaging around 50mpg – testament to the power of EfficientDynamics – yet still able to hit 62mph in 8.5 seconds.

It also makes a powerful argument against going for diesel; to get equivalent performance and trim from a diesel version, you need the 118d Sport costing £23,270.

Now that will average around 13mpg more than the petrol model, but you will need to do many more miles to make the fuel savings claw back the car's extra £2,000 purchase price.

A caveat to this is that the petrol car will cost £115 a year in road tax, while the diesel will be free in year one and £30 annually after that, and should depreciate more slowly. It's your call...

C-Class upset at fleet awards

BMW'S 3-Series is a UK top-10 seller, largely due to company sales, but the unsung yet impressive Mercedes-Benz C-Class landed the prestigious Fleet News awards' Best Premium Car gong instead.

The verdict was aided by a free Elegance to Sport trim upgrade, saving up to £1,700 making the Merc (estate pictured) "the ideal choice for both drivers and fleet managers".

...and Passat scores as well

FLEET News also decided that VW's comparatively unglamorous Passat had hidden virtues – the title made it Best New Company Car overall as well as Best Upper Medium Car winner.

The top award is decided by those at the coal face – fleet operators, particularly mindful of operating costs and resale values. Individual awards are decided by a panel of industry experts.

Volvo turns on to eco drivers

VOLVO won't launch its plug-in diesel hybrid version of the V40 fastback estate until November – the first of its kind.

But the model has already been judged the UK's most highly-anticipated green car, according to TheGreenCarWebsite.co.uk, collecting more than 30 per cent of visitors' votes.

Second place went to the Chevrolet Volt/Vauxhall Ampera with just 11 per cent.

FOOTBALL

The perils of playing the location game as Gills ponder Priestfield future again

Paul Scally might be desperate to move his club to a new stadium, but as Fred Atkins writes, moving any side out of its heartland is a major gamble... as other teams have found to their cost

THERE doesn't seem to be a lot of love around for the Priestfield Stadium.

In 2004, a survey by the Observer newspaper named it as the worst ground in the Football League and described it as "the biggest dump in English football".

Rival fans said it: "Makes Middlesbrough look like Monte Carlo" and that as a venue it "never fails to live down to expectations".

One particularly vituperative critic said: "It used to be nothing more than a couple of cowsheds knocked together. The away end has two Portakabins for toilets and the worst catering outside Selhurst Park. The walk from the train station is like walking through the Shangri-La Caravan Park just after closing time."

Urban sophisticate Peter Crouch isn't an admirer either, describing the fans as, "hillbillies in the film Deliverance".

And this week Paul Scally declared there was "no sustainable future" for Gillingham at the venue they've sustained a club at for 109 years.

You can understand why Scally might cast an envious eye over Brighton's new stadium in Falmer, but for every successful relocation, there's a rich man's folly like Darlington's Arena, or Nene Park, which eventually helped bleed the life out of Rushden Town and Irthlingborough Diamonds and is now threatening to do the same to Kettering.

The economic arguments for moving to purpose-built arenas always sound compelling, but are often based on over-optimistic projections of just how many fans a new venue will attract.

And by moving a football club out of the community it grew out of, something is lost that it's impossible to quantify.

Only four senior football grounds have been built in Kent since World War Two.

Two, Dartford's Princes Park and Maidstone's unfinished Gallagher Stadium were built in or near town centres, to replace grounds that should never have been bulldozed in the first place (like Brighton's Goldstone Ground).

The other two illustrate just how badly relocation can backfire.

Sittingbourne's Central Park is the archetypal white elephant, a venue that literally went to the dogs. It may only be a mile out of the town centre, but it might as well have been in a different borough judging by Brickies' attendances over the past few seasons.

Ashford's Homelands is, in terms of facilities, one of the best grounds in Kent, but you can get a train to Lille in the time it'll take you to walk there from Ashford station, while Mike Floate, author of the book Non League Football Grounds of Kent describes it as demonstrating "almost everything that can go wrong" with a football ground.

Priestfield's location by contrast is right in the middle of the most densely populated area of the county. Tens of thousands of people live within walking distance and if Gillingham did move there's no guarantee they would follow them.

At Darlington the word 'unsustainable' is now used to describe the 25,000-seat arena, where barely 1,000 fans watch a floundering team.

Gillingham have historically attracted a hard core of 3,000 fans, even when results are bad. What happens if they move to a 20,000-seat arena the die-hards can't walk to any more?

Pictures: ADY KERRY

OUT WITH THE OLD?: Peter Crouch doesn't like Priestfield and Observer readers aren't keen, but what would Gillingham lose if they move out?

Scally raps out warning over club's future

GILLINGHAM chairman Paul Scally's has written to all 55 members of Medway Council claiming there is no "sustainable future for Gillingham Football Club on its current site" and urging them to reject a scheme to develop Medway Docks because it could ruin the club's chances of building a new stadium at Mill Hill.

Scally says a report by Medway Council into a possible new venue for Gillingham identified land at Medway Docks, owned by Peel Holdings, as "the most appropriate site in Medway by far".

A plan to relocate Gillingham there was drafted, but the scheme was delayed by the recession and a wrangle over the need for "enabling development", specifically a supermarket.

Scally writes that he was incredulous to find revised plans had been drafted for the site in September 2011, which ignored the football club.

He says: "To the utter astonishment of the club, its advisors and others, and without any notification or discussion, the club heard of an exhibition in Medway, at which Peel were presenting to the public their plans to develop the southern area of their site.

"Their plans included all the facilities of the club's proposed scheme, ie. food retail, hotel, conference facility, leisure and so on, but excluded any mention of the stadium."

Gillingham have since agreed an option on a 40-acre site at Mill Hill, but Scally claims that if Peel's revised scheme is allowed to proceed

SCALLY: Appeal to councillors over plans

it could blow the club's plans to build a stadium elsewhere out of the water.

He wrote: "We accept that as the landowner, Peel are at liberty to submit any application that they so wish, but if the Peel scheme as presented gains approval, especially with the food retail element included – the most valuable enabling development available currently – it would be virtually impossible to construct a new stadium for the football club in Medway as there would be insufficient enabling development funding left available from other facilities."

A clear warning followed: "I wanted to take this opportunity to outline to you, and to all members, the very serious position the club has found itself in, effectively frozen out of a site and scheme which it believed it was making progress on.

"It is essential members realise a new stadium in Medway cannot be developed without firstly a site but also, and more significantly, without appropriate enabling development, ie. residential, food retail, conferencing and hotel use, and bulky goods retail."

Scally claims that while there is interest in a supermarket on the Mill Hill site, it is contingent on the Peel scheme being rejected, writing "there is no market for two such retailers in such close proximity".

And his parting shot to members effectively claimed the club's future was at stake.

"I therefore urge you all, if your wishes are still to ensure your local football club remains as part of the community in Medway, to ensure the Peel planning application is rejected in its current form; at least until members are able to fully consider the alternative proposals that will be submitted on Mill Hill, in conjunction with one of the national developers as partners," he said,

Clarke keeps an eye on the neighbours in survival fight

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

ANOTHER week, another must-win game for Tunbridge Wells, who travel to Old Dunstonians on Saturday knowing that defeat could be fatal for their chances of staying in London 2 South East.

The Wells just about kept themselves afloat by beating Warlingham 29-22 last week, but only after an afternoon of serious tension at St Mark's, which saw them fight back from 14-0 down to snare a bonus point win.

Heathfield & Waldron's victory over Sevenoaks means the neighbours from up the A21 are now the side most likely to be dragged under if Tunbridge Wells can win their last two games.

The Oaks, who haven't won a game since January 7, are ninth in the table, one place above the relegation zone, one point ahead of Tunbridge Wells and with two tricky games against Lewes and Aylesford remaining.

Wells chairman Roger Clarke says the target is to give themselves the best possible chance of avoiding the drop by winning at least one of their remaining games and securing at least one bonus point in the other (their season concludes against Lewes on April 14).

"We're almost at full strength and as strong if not stronger than we were against Warlingham," Clarke said.

The Skinners School trio of Rory Reames, Ben Madgwick and Sam Catlin should all return, if they've emerged unscathed from the national schools' sevens tournament in midweek, and

Picture: BRUCE ELLIOTT

PIVOTAL: Wells know a win is essential if they are to avoid falling through the relegation trapdoor

Matt Spicer will be on the bench.

James Gwinnet is unavailable but the only new injury worry is JJ Redman, who hyper-extended his arm during last weekend's game.

After 22 minutes Warlingham were 14-0 in front, but after clawing back a try to trail 14-5 at the break, the second half saw Tunbridge Wells take the lead and hold their nerve when they were pegged back to 22-22.

"It was pivotal," Clarke said. "As far as the season is concerned it was extremely important because I think Sevenoaks will find it difficult to win their last two games but we can't assume they won't. If we can win two, or win one and get a bonus point we might be ok, but we've got to go to Old Dunstonians and look for the win."

"At 14-0 and 22-22 it was a bit dodgy, but in the last 10 minutes we gained control."

Cape Town challenge awaits as team touchdown in Africa

TUNBRIDGE Wells start their first ever tour of South Africa on Saturday, with a friendly against a Bellville Invitation XI in Cape Town.

The Wells' 15-man squad were due to fly out yesterday and were originally supposed to be kicking off the tour with a game against Uitizig.

When this fixture fell through an alternative game with Bellville was arranged with the help of Philip Du Plessis, who spent a season with Tunbridge Wells in 2008.

Bellville, one of the oldest clubs in Cape Town, are expected to provide some of the toughest opposition on the seven-match tour.

The Wells then play Groot Drakenstein on Sunday, Khayelitsha on Tuesday and Avendale on Wednesday, before a three-day break ahead of a game with Stellenbosch Scorpions on Saturday April 7. They have a fixture with a Western Province Chairman's XI on Sunday April 8 and the concluding game with Pinelands on April 11.

"They (the players) really are taking this tour very seriously," said the club's administrator Alan Cutts.

Picture: IGOR KUPCO

TOUR: Ambassadors for the town

"They're all going to each game, they'll all be in full dress code and they are all going as ambassadors for Tunbridge Wells."

Supporters and non-travelling members should be able to follow the team's progress via the club's website at www.tunbridgewellscoc.org.uk.

FOOTBALL

Vase stars Herne Bay head back to Earth at the Culverden

RUNAWAY Kent League leaders Herne Bay will visit Tunbridge Wells on Tuesday night, just three days after their FA Vase semi-final second leg at West Auckland.

The Kent coast side drew 2-2 in last Saturday's home leg and make the 300-mile trip this weekend for the decider.

As a result of Herne Bay's run in the Vase, Tunbridge Wells are without a fixture this Saturday and manager Martin Larkin will be hoping that whatever the result at Auckland, his side are in a position to capitalise against opponents he rates as being on a different level to the rest of the league.

The Jekyll and Hyde form that has marked Tunbridge Wells' season continued last week when they beat Deal Town 5-0 at the Culverden.

Andy McMath converted a penalty after just two minutes, Jack Harris quickly added a second and Ryan Rook, Carl Cornell and McMath again all found the net in the second half.

"We have really struggled with Deal over the last couple of years but we were very clinical in the second half," Larkin told Tunbridge Wells' website. "Considering the heat and the fact that we had four or five struggling with the flu bug that's going round, we are delighted."

LARKIN: Set for midweek test

"Perry Spackman and Drew Crush were very secure at the back, and we caused them a lot of problems going forward. We now have two massive tests coming up against Herne Bay, sandwiched around a trip to Cray Valley so it will be an exciting couple of weeks."

NON-LEAGUE FOOTBALL FOCUS WITH FRED ATKINS

Trouble, but of who's making?

“HOW should you report on anti-social behaviour at football matches?”

During the Thatcher era, football fans were portrayed by the likes of Kelvin McKenzie at the Sun as being one step removed from amoeba, but when the political wind changed stories that would once have had the average Daily Mail reader foaming at the mouth were hushed up, as England mounted doomed bids to host the World Cup.

Significant violence went almost unreported and it was possible to watch the entire 2006 tournament and swallow the myth that England fans were all renaissance men on some kind of cultural exchange, as opposed to topless simpletons showing off their moobs and singing songs about the IRA.

In the past decade the most serious incident I witnessed at a non-league game was a fan throwing a can of lager at a rival goalkeeper during a Kent League Cup final.

It wasn't exactly clever, but it must have been a slow news week at a rival publication because they treated this as front page news and raised the spectre of hooliganism returning.

My report mentioned the incident and said that the game, played on a day when there were no Football League fixtures, had attracted a number of fans from London clubs, some of whom were singing slightly un-PC songs but none of whom were causing trouble.

The following week an anonymous letter appeared in the post, purporting to be from an organisation called Millwall In The County of Kent, claiming this report was a travesty and protesting the Lions' name had been dragged through the mud.

I had a pretty good idea who the author was, knew he wasn't speaking for Millwall officially and was also pretty sure he'd not been at the game, which meant he wasn't in a strong position to pass judgement on something he hadn't actually seen.

I wasn't at Herne Bay last Saturday so I can't comment on the alleged boorishness that took place during their FA Vase semi-final first leg with West Auckland, but most of the reports I read led on the football angle and seemed to keep everything in proportion.

This included the report on Bay's official website, which to the club's credit refused to sweep the incidents under the carpet.

While Herne Bay's manager Simon Halsey understandably wanted to talk about the football, he did say that when you have 2,000 people gathered something's could kick off, particularly if there's alcohol involved.

At the exact moment that game kicked off I was walking past a 'family' pub, where parents were swearing at their pitbulls and letting their own cigarette smoke blown into the faces of their offspring. At a football ground this would constitute anti-social behaviour.

In a Maidstone alehouse it just isn't news.
